

HERB STUDIES RECORDS
OF CABINET PROSPECTS
BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1928 by Post Pub. Co.

Washington — Although the correspondents aboard the Hoover battleship have refrained from speculating about cabinet possibilities out of deference to the president-elect, it is known that Herbert Hoover has been giving much of his time to a study of the biographies of men from whom his selections may be made.

Several persons who were asked to contribute information to Mr. Hoover before he left California, have told their friends about Mr. Hoover's unusual course and little by little what seemed to be at first simply a casual request for data has turned out to be a rather general canvass on the part of the president-elect for suggestions as to the personnel of his cabinet.

Mr. Hoover asked for facts and the record each man had made and just why, from every consideration possible, he should be selected. It is not known how many people he asked to help him in getting material together, but aboard ship he has classified the prospects and given much study to the memoranda about each name.

USES SYSTEMATIC METHOD

It is characteristic of Herbert Hoover to go about his task of selecting a cabinet in a systematic way. Instead of listening first to the appeals of political leaders and friends, he has asked that every man of merit be thoroughly written up so he can ponder on the capabilities of each and then come back and ask questions.

This does not mean that the president-elect will have decided every cabinet position on his arrival in Florida or that the choice will necessarily have narrowed to two or three names for each place but it does mean that unless on his return better names are sent to him and he sees reasons for accepting them the work of selecting the cabinet will largely have been accomplished before Mr. Hoover reaches the United States in the early part of next month. It would not be surprising if the announcement of the new cabinet were made around the first of February so that the new officers can begin to familiarize themselves with the work of their predecessors and begin also to adjust their own business affairs.

To be able to come to Washington on two weeks' notice may be possible for some of the political members who are perhaps engaged in professional work but to get outstanding business-men will require much more time. It is necessary for a cabinet officer to resign from directorates and in some instances officials have even sold their holdings in companies that might have relations with the government. Typical of this was the attitude of the late John W. Weeks who made perhaps the biggest financial sacrifice of any man in America to enter public life. He gave up a profitable business, and practically gave the result of his labors to his associates, never to return to private business again. There have been other men who have felt that association with the government meant a complete severance of business ties.

For this reason Mr. Hoover will not wish to keep his prospective selections in doubt till a time too close to March 4th. Also the president-elect will wish to turn his thoughts to legislative policies and appointments of subordinate officials. The voyage aboard the battleship may seem like a vacation but those who know Hoover best say he has been working all the time.

British People Doubtful About King's Strength to Continue Battle

BULLETIN

New York — (P) — Prince George, youngest son of the king of England, was on his way home aboard the Connaught Benaresa Saturday after a 10-hour visit to New York. During his stay the British prince did what most visitors to the city do—visited the Woolworth tower, Bronx Park zoo, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He was brought to New York from Bermuda by the British cruiser Durban, aboard which he has been serving as a junior lieutenant for several months.

Lord Dawson of Penn. returned to Buckingham palace shortly after 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and had a long consultation with Sir Stanley Hewitt. He left soon after 3 o'clock. The prince of Wales left the palace shortly before Lord Dawson. Queen Mary did not take her customary drive Saturday afternoon.

Anxiety over King George's increased Saturday. There was concern as to whether the strength of the 63-year-old sovereign would be sufficient to banish the poison that had gone into the blood stream from his infected thigh.

HIGH SLIGHT RELEASE

The vigil that England has kept for 25 days over the king's sick bed, it was felt, must at best continue for several weeks before he could be regarded as being out of danger. Information that the king had suffered a slight relapse was generally accepted calmly and with hopes still high. There was as yet no alarm but there was a greater anxiety.

The increase in disquietude was due to the general condition of the local infection itself. The local infection was apparently being satisfactorily taken care of by drainage.

That the king had not been able to maintain the progress which he had made immediately after the drainage operation was a great disappointment to the country. It was no surprise, however, for his doctors gave warning several days ago that from the nature of the case ups and downs would have to be expected for a long period.

The doctors attending the king confined their public announcements to brief bulletins, the evening one stating:

PHYSICIANS MORE GLOOMY

Medical contributors to the newspapers who have interpreted these bulletins daily Saturday were considerably less hopeful in their statements than Friday. Medical correspondents of the Daily Express said "it looks as though the general infection is assuming a more serious position even than before." Medical opinion seemed to be agreed that the generalized toxemia was sapping the powers of the king.

To conserve the patient's strength for the long and difficult struggle which he must make if he is to get well everything to which the king ordinarily gives attention has been kept from him. He was not informed of President Coolidge's message. Nor has he been told anything of the progress of the international cricket matches of the Australia, reports of which are being followed by the public with an interest the intensity of which is comparable only to that shown in the king's illness. Ordinarily the king keeps up each match with the same keen interest.

LEGIONAIRES ASK SUPPORT OF CAL'S NEW CRUISER BILL

Members of Oney Johnston post of the American legion have gone on record as favoring the cruiser bill suggested by President Calvin Coolidge in his recent message to congress, according to James H. Balliet, commander of the post and accordingly have asked Senators Robert M. La Follette and James G. Blaine and Congressman George J. Schneider, to support the bill. The local post's stand on the question was forwarded to the senators and congressman during the week.

TOONEN RETURNS FROM ASSESSORS' MEETING

Schmedeman To Be Head Of Inaugural Committee

Madison — (P) — Mayor Albert G. Schmedeman of Madison, will be chairman of the inaugural committee that inducts into office Walter J. Kohler, the man who defeated him for governor.

Other members of the committee probably will be three Madison attorneys, Loyal T. Beggs, senior, C. A. Beggs, Rice Lake; Harry Butler, W. R. Bagley, both widely known attorneys; Carl Johnson, Madison manufacturer; Ralph M. Immel, Wisconsin's adjutant general; Col. Nicholas M. Schantz, Immel's chief aide, and Dean Harry L. Russell, of the University of Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

Mr. Bagley, it is said, will serve as master of ceremonies. General Immel will be master of the day, and Colonel Schantz is secretary of the committee.

It is said the inauguration will be of modest proportions and not approach the magnitude of Governor Zimmerman's entrance into office two years ago. Colonel Schantz is in eastern Wisconsin cities Saturday working on the program.

With Chief Justice Aid Vinje III, the oath of office will be administered by Justice Marvin B. Rosenberry, it has been learned and the ceremony will take place at high noon, according to law.

Tax-delinquent Lands Are Problem Discussed at Rhinelander Meeting

BY DONALD C. BOLLES

Associated Press Staff Writer

Rhineland — (P) — Northern Wisconsin sought Saturday in an unusual conference to find a solution to the grave situation presented by a rapidly mounting roll of tax-delinquent lands with a consequent loss of revenue.

Out of the morning session of the conference of 50 representatives of 16 counties came a definite decision to ask help from the coming session of the legislature. The conferees agreed to ask the legislature to enact legislation that would enable towns and counties to relocate settlers on land more suitable to agriculture, and also to frame laws that would make it less desirable for settlers to locate on lands more adaptable to reforestation than raising crops.

Colonel Harman explained that the underlying idea of the plan was that all countries would place at the disposal of the league 10 per cent of their trained pilots. These pilots would serve as units of an air force of peace, which would always be ready for mobilization where war threatened.

The present dispute between Paraguay and Bolivia was cited by Colonel Harman as an instance where an international air force operating under the league or the Kellogg-Briand pact renouncing war would be a powerful deterrent. He believes that a thousand aviators surrounding a hostile country could force it to submit to the will of the league.

BELOIT COLLEGE SHUTS DOORS FOR HOLIDAYS

Beloit — (P) — The faculty of Beloit college Saturday decided to close the school until after the holidays as a result of an epidemic of flu in this city. The regular vacation was not to begin until next Thursday.

MILWAUKEE — (P) — Three teachers' colleges and public schools in four cities were closed Saturday for Christmas holidays, a week earlier than usual, due to prevalence of colds and influenza.

Officials of Lawrence college, Appleton, closed the school at noon Friday due to prevalence of colds and influenza. President George M. Snodgrass of the La Crosse State Teachers' college, closed the school, and similar action was taken at the Oshkosh State Teachers' college at Stevens Point, Friday.

MOSES NAMES 4 POINTS IN U. S. SENATE

New Hampshire Man Presents Resolution as Declaration of Rights

Washington — (P) — On the hitherto clear blue sky of the Kellogg-Briand treaty there has appeared something that looks like a reservation cloud.

It was introduced in the senate Friday as a resolution by Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, and this is what it said:

"Resolved, that the senate of the United States declares that in advising and consenting to the multi-lateral treaty it does so with the understanding:

"1.—That the treaty imposes no obligation on the United States to resort to coercive or punitive measures against any offending nation;

"2.—That the treaty does not impose any limitations upon the Monroe doctrine or the traditional policies of the United States;

"3.—That the treaty does not impair the right of the United States to defend its territory, possessions, trade or interests;

"4.—That the treaty does not obligate the United States to the conditions of any treaty to which the United States is not a party."

The resolution, it is said, was brought expressions of a divergent opinion on the treaty for the renunciation of war, its significance and the importance to be attached to letters by other world powers that accompanied their adherence to the pact.

Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, who made a name for himself by his fight on the league of nations, has declared that he favored a "proper resolution."

Moses said that his resolution would not be a part of the treaty but merely a declaration of American rights.

Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee, and one of those who favors passage of the Kellogg-Briand treaty without any strings attached, asserted he opposed the Moses resolution and he challenged the contention that the letters of Great Britain and France might change or modify the treaty.

These letters are expected to furnish Moses, Reed and other pact opponents campaign material. They have pointed to the letter of Great Britain which said that country accepted the treaty on "the distinct understanding that it does not prejudice their freedom of action" with respect to defense of the territories.

Neither Moses nor Reed have issued a comprehensive statement on their interpretation of the letters but from an outside source views thought to coincide with theirs in some degree have been made on the subject by a treaty generally by Professor Phillip M. Brown, of Princeton university.

YOUTHFUL PILOT FLIES FROM WEST TO NEW YORK

Courtside, N. Y. — (P) — Richard James, 17-year-old pilot, Saturday completed a transcontinental flight begun Oct. 30, in San Francisco.

James made the flight to win a $1,000 prize offered for the first pilot alone across the country. Several ground landings were made on the way. Poor flying weather, and damages necessitated by these forced landings accounted for the month and half taken for the cross-country flight.

James flew unaccompanied from the west coast to Columbus, but from there he was placed in another plane by Martin Jense, California to Hawaii flier.

Good Fellows Urged To Help Work Of Charity

The Good Fellow list printed on another page of this paper is growing very slowly. Whether this is an indication of a lack of Christmas spirit or just a slow start in the annual collection to help the poor has not been determined. It is hoped, however, that there will be enough Good Fellows in Appleton to make sure that every poor child has something to be happy over on Christmas day.

The women of our cooperating charities in Appleton Welfare council will find that work badly handicapped this Christmas season unless there is a generous response from the Good Fellows. These women are so busy ministering to the poor that

Menasha And Neenah Get Airmail Through Appleton

Menasha and Neenah were definitely given air mail service Saturday morning when the United States postoffice department in Washington announced that arrangements will be made as once for a "star route" messenger to carry air mail to and from the Twin Cities postoffices to the Appleton postoffice from where it will be dispatched special messenger to the George A. Whiting airport.

Arrangements for this service were made by Congressman George J. Schneider of Appleton, representing the Ninth district. Mr. Schneider has been active in an effort to give airmail to the Twin Cities since the matter was put before him about two weeks ago.

The Twin Cities will not have direct pouch service to the airport under this arrangement but the service to Twin City postal patrons will amount to the same thing.

SPECIAL MESSENGER

Air mail from Menasha and Neenah will be brought to the Appleton postoffice each afternoon in time to be put in pouches for delivery to the airport to catch the south-bound mail plane due here at 4:05 p. m. thus giving Menasha and Neenah residents exactly the same service as is afforded Appleton except that the closing hour at the postoffices in those cities will be slightly earlier.

Mail for Menasha and Neenah carried by the north-bound planes arriving here at 8:40 in the morning will be taken to the Appleton postoffice where it will be put into pouches and delivered to Twin City postoffice messenger in time for delivery in the morning, thus giving Twin City people substantially the same service afforded Appleton.

Mr. Schneider said in his telegram that this service will be continued if it is justified by the volume of mail.

Congressman Schneider's telegram follows:

"Succeeded today in having postoffice department make following arrangements for Neenah-Menasha air mail: Star route messenger will be appointed to deliver mail for Neenah-Menasha on arrival of same at Appleton postoffice by messenger from airport and return with mail from Neenah-Menasha postoffices to Appleton postoffice in afternoon for delivery by messenger to air port. This service will continue if volume of mail justifies."

Menasha and Neenah business men were sorely disappointed when

Pan-American Conference Using Every Effort to Prevent Clash of Nations

Lugano, Switzerland — (P) — The council of the league of nations Saturday voted to send a new appeal to Bolivia and Paraguay to settle their border dispute by pacific methods and in the meantime to refrain from military measures.

Washington — (P) — There are signs that Paraguayan and Bolivian soldiers will be kept out of the trenches. War between the two countries is still a possibility, but peace work for peace seems to have gained the upper hand temporarily.

Cancellation efforts, which have been distributed over a wide front, are beginning to concentrate now at Pan-American conference on conciliation and arbitration here. The conference, after proceeding carefully since it opened, has offered its services as mediator in the dispute. This offer came in the form of a resolution drafted by a special international committee which also submitted to the convention a statement of policy.

The resolution committed "the conference to proffer its good offices to the interested parties for the purpose of promoting suitable conciliation measures with the aim of preventing the principle of non-intervention and arbitration as a solid foundation of international life."

PLANE LANDS AT 1:15 AFTER HECTIC TRIP

Start of First Air Mail Flight Delayed Three Hours by Murky Weather

BRINGS 3 BAGS OF MAIL

Ship Gets Stuck at Fond du Lac but Has no Difficulty Here

Zooming from a muggy sky of mist and fog at 1:15 Saturday afternoon Charles W. (Speed), Holman, in a Stinson-Detroit airplane, made a perfect landing at George A. Whiting airport delivered three pouches of mail for Appleton citizens—the first ever received by direct air mail in this city.

He landed, and unloaded the mail sacks, greeted those who met him and took off at 1:18, the record landing and take-off time on this flight.

It was the initial flight of the air mail service established by the federal postal department in the Fox River valley. The plane was scheduled to leave Milwaukee at 7:30 Saturday morning but the fog was so dense that the trip did not start until 10:45.

A large number of Appleton, Neenah and Menasha people were at the airport awaiting the arrival of the plane but were disappointed because Holman landed on a runway near the edge of the field and only five or six men were close enough to get a close glimpse of the plane and the driver.

Early Saturday morning several people gathered at the airport but as soon as word reached the field that the trip would not start until later in the morning most of the people left.

TRACE PLANE

The progress of the plane was traced by the Post-Crescent via the telephone from Milwaukee, through Fond du Lac and Oshkosh.

The plane landed at the Fondy airport at 1:15 but mired in the mucky runways as it was about to take off again and it was necessary to tow the ship from the mud, causing a half hour's delay.

A good landing was made at Oshkosh and the take-off there was without trouble, Speed said.

The plane was heard here about 1:13 but due to the mist and fog spectators on the field did not see the ship until it was almost over the airport and only about 100 feet above the ground. Holman swooped down close to the field, sighted the runways and then swept back up into the sky, made a short turn and landed perfectly in the northeast corner of the field.

BRINGS 3 POUCHES

F. F. Wettengel, acting postmaster, Professor John Ross Frampton, a representative of The Post-Crescent and several mail carriers welcomed Holman.

Three pouches of mail, one from Oshkosh, another from Fond du Lac and one from Milwaukee, totaling about 100 pounds, were unloaded here. A small pouch of mail, weighing 21 pounds, was sent to Green Bay. The plane landed at Blech field in Green Bay at 1:34 and is due to return to Appleton at 4:05.

Three parcels also arrived via airmail, all carrying Christmas seals from the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association headquarters at Milwaukee. One was addressed to the Appleton Woman's club, another to the Neenah Health Council and the third to the Menasha Economics club.

Postmaster Wettengel gave Holman an American flag to carry to Green Bay and bring back on the southbound trip Saturday afternoon. The flag will be kept by Mr. Wettengel as a keepsake of the first flight.

Pilot Holman said the landing field here is the best on the route.

When he turned his plane toward the earth to make his landing he swept so close to the highway that several motorists, who happened by, stooped their cars in alarm. It almost seemed as if he would become entangled in the telephones wires then tilted the nose of the plane above the lines and swooped into a perfect landing.

Postmaster Wettengel estimated there would be approximately 400

Home Builders Can Learn Much at Model Home

See For Themselves How They Can Make Own Plans Better

Men and women who expect to build homes in the next few years should not miss the opportunity of visiting the Post-Crescent's Model home on Opechee-st. where they will obtain information for which they will forever be grateful.

So many features are included in the Post-Crescent home that every prospective home builder is sure to find something that will interest him, and which he can use to great advantage in his new home without materially affecting the cost.

Those who visit the house during this period of cold weather cannot escape noticing the warmth and comfort in spite of the fact that the window openings are covered only by muslin and that less than one third of the radiators are attached and in use. The secret of this comfort in the insulation of the home. A great many home builders pay very little attention to this most important feature, contenting themselves with filling the walls with shavings or adopting some makeshift insulation of that sort.

Insulation was carefully studied in the Model Home to assure the best results and while it costs more originally to build a well insulated home the money that is saved in fuel bills in a very few years will make up this extra cost and thereafter the home owner is in a position to regard his fuel savings as extra dividends on the insulation investment.

In this electrical age the wiring plan of the Model home is of tremendous interest. The wiring is according to the Red Seal plan and is so designed that it never is necessary to grope one's way through a dark room to find a light switch or to feel one's way out of a room after the lights are turned off. The switches have been arranged in such a manner that lights can be turned out at almost every room opening.

The electric wiring system installed by the Art-Killmer Electric Co. alone is worth a couple of hours' inspection.

One of the most interesting rooms in the Model Home is the library, with its curved ceilings and its splendid fireplace. Every home builder is sure to get some worthwhile ideas from this room alone and he will find others in the dining room, the kitchen, the living room and in fact every room in the building.

Few home builders have the time to give to the study of home building as was given in the design of the Model Home and therefore they can learn much from the practical employment there.

Home builders often put a good deal of thought on their bathroom appointments but pay little attention to the pipes which carry the water, leaving this largely to chance or to the judgment of the plumber. In the Model Home and in the bathroom pipe is used for all hot water leads and these pipes will still be in use a half century and more from now.

The purpose of the Model Home primarily is to give Appleton people the benefits of a builder's experience. These articles have endeavored to show prospective builders what can be incorporated in a model home and they are invited to visit the Model Home at any time to see how these features are used to make sure for themselves whether they believe they are worth while in a house they might build.

Rubber Tile Floors In Model Home

Once upon a time there was a man who had the habit of wiping dishes for his wife after supper. This man had the additional habit of breaking a regular percentage of the dishes he wiped. First his wife thought he had better stop helping her with the dishes. Then she decided that after all he was nothing but a big baby and had to be humored as such. When the baby bumped his head, did she scold the baby? No she spanked the floor, and stopped the baby's tears. Did she scold her husband? No she had a rubber tiled floor put in her kitchen, stopped the breakage, and kept her husband happy.

Prevention of breakage is not the only advantages the rubber tiled floors in the kitchen and dining alcove of The Post-Crescent Model Home can boast. The one thing demanded of floors today is permanent beauty. It is not enough that the new floor be good looking and the material lend itself to color combinations that harmonize with surroundings and color schemes of the architect and interior decorator. This beauty must be permanent.

Last but not least, a type of construction that lays flat, stays flat and is easily cleaned and polished. The color or pattern must permeate the entire material—not simply be a surface design.

Wright rubber tile which will cover the kitchen and dining alcove floors of the Model Home combine all these features and their wearing qualities have been tested under the most adverse conditions. The tiles in the Model Home will be of the same material as that which comprises the rubber pavements on roadways and bridges, and which have withstood the heavy traffic in offices and manufacturing plants.

The Wright rubber tiled floor is water proof, noiseless, sanitary, and easily cleaned. Without a grain it cannot crack, chip or splinter like wood for sand. It is unaffected by contraction, expansion, or temperature changes. Because its resiliency greatly reduces breakage, these floors are particularly adaptable to kitchens. They are also easy on the feet and housewives who must be on their feet all day long find the tiled floors very restful.

How to Reach the Post-Crescent Model Home

The Post-Crescent's Model Home is located on E. Opechee-st. Autoists can reach the property by turning to the right off E. Pacific-st. at the point where Highway 41 turns to the left. The lot is a block south of the corner of E. Pacific and N. Leninwah-sts. or follow street car line to entrance of Riverside Cemetery, turning right on Owaissa-st. The rear entrance to lot is one block south on Owaissa-st.

No Hanging Of Screens In Model Home

There's one institution the Post-Crescent Model Home will never see. It has killed another old custom. And nobody cares. For many years fathers have used the first spring Sunday morning to maul the draperies, dirty the windows, sit dangerously on high window sills, and install the screens.

The Rolcreens in the Model Home will require none of these annual attentions. They are installed once. They remain permanently. When they are pulled down for the heat, fly, and mosquito season they are practically invisible. When they are pulled up for the winter they roll into their metal housings which are inconspicuously located at the top of the window. Rolcreens do not interfere with interior decoration values. Lowered, they are not obvious. By merely raising them, they are completely concealed and protected.

Rolcreens are installed from the inside. Therefore the screens are easily accessible, and at a touch are raised for operating or washing windows. They do not gather dirt and offer year around protection to drapery. In winter, when black, dirty sills and frosted panes come to ruin expensive draperies if a little ventilation is desired, Rolcreens are lowered and protect them.

Rolscreen wire is always held tight and will not sag or bag with use because it is stretched by the tension of the spring in the housing. The Rolcreens are practically indestructible. If the screen wire accidentally receives a blow hard enough to tear or bag the ordinary screen, the catches at the sides of the screen are simply released without injuring the wire. Then you simply pull the screen toward you and release all the catches. Raising it, and again lowering it, automatically sends the catches in their old grooves and once more the screen is taut.

Two Electric Clocks To Go In Model Home

Some say civilization is making life easier but in some respects it certainly looks as if this progress is making it more difficult.

Take a telechron electric clock, for instance. The latest thing in clocks and clock convenience without a doubt. But a hard thing on the small boy who is going to school.

Small boys and girls have a multitude of good excuses, but the real reason they are tardy, of course, is that they oversleep. However, when teacher says, "Why were you late, John?" the natural answer is "The clock was slow."

Naturally, too, it is the accepted answer. Its acceptance is a formality, like the public's acceptance of a political party platform. But supposing the teachers carries it one step farther. "Have you a Telechron?"

And if helpless Johnny answers "Yes," his case falls. For the Telechron is never slow, never fast. The maddening thing will show all tardiness blame on the family. Itself, it never deviates a minute for it is regulated according to the master clock at the power company. If it is once set correctly, it continues to run correctly without winding forever after.

The Post-Crescent Model Home will have two Telechrons. One, a round white one, will be in the kitchen, and the other, a tall grandfather clock will stand in the hall or living room. The grandfather clock has a name that doesn't match its voice which chimes the quarter hours with young, melodious notes.

Need Violet Rays to Keep Body Strong

There is really a pot of treasure below the rainbow, but it is a pot of health instead of a pot of gold.

The colors in the rainbow, ranging from red to violet, are the visible rays of the sun. Above the red, are the invisible heat rays; and below the violet, are the invisible ultra violet rays, a certain range of which are beneficial to health.

People who work outdoors all day get a necessary amount of the health rays through the sun that beats directly upon them. But people who work indoors, get an insufficient amount of the necessary element from the pale dilution that filters through windows of office and store windows.

For some time scientists have realized that this lack of the invigorating properties of sunshine is responsible for tuberculosis of the bones, glands, and joints, eczema, and other skin diseases; and rickets. So doctors secured violet ray apparatus and hospitals, too, equipped themselves with ray machines.

Doctors and hospitals utilized the violet ray for cure. But although the violet ray is as potent a preventive as a cure and builds up the human system so it can resist

Summer's Heat And Winter's Cold Kept Out of Model Home

Winter cold and summer heat seep through the walls of the old fashioned house and fluctuate the temperature within. Part of the furnace heat warms the house and part is lost through cracks and crevices to mingle with the snowflakes or the nor' wester's outside. The new fashioned house is insulated. Its walls are weather proof. The Post-Crescent Model Home, which will naturally be of the latter type, will be cool in summer warm in winter, and will need less fuel than the house which is not insulated. Celotex, the insulating material which is to line its walls, provides fivefold advantages.

Celotex is made from the fibers of sugar cane. In addition to structural strength, it has the qualities of resisting the passage of heat, cold, noise, and moisture. The material, made into big, broad boards, seven sixteenths of an inch thick, four feet wide and from eight to twelve feet long, is frequently used to replace the ordinary wood boards used in sheathing, and is also made into the form of Celotex Lath, which is used as a plaster base. Where Celotex

Lath is used under the plaster, the plasterer is able to do a much better job, supplying a wall without those openings that cause unsightly lath marks that deface so many homes. Each unit is eighteen inches wide and four feet long and weighs only three and a half pounds. Each lath covers six square feet.

The greatest advantage of the new lath is that it provides insulation with the plaster at little extra cost. The cane-fiber material in the walls makes them weather proof, and in winter, results in an amazing saving in fuel bills. In a properly insulated home fuel bills are about one-third less. Insulation makes another saving. Where there is Celotex in the walls, a smaller and less expensive heating system will do the work satisfactorily.

An insulated home is a healthy home. Doctors agree many colds are caused by sudden changes of temperature in the house. They agree that the steam heated person who toasts himself by the radiator piecemeal, is a white faced, shivering, snuffling piece of humanity before the winter is over. In the insulated home the temperature is even. Dead air cells in the Celotex keep the heat from the furnace from leaking through the walls, making the house uniformly heated during the day, and retaining the heat through the night. Children can play on the floor with perfect safety since the Celotex cuts off draughts.

The cane-fiber has heat stopping qualities due to its large number of dead air cells. The hot rays of summer are stopped at the walls and turned back. It is never "too hot to sleep" in an insulated home. It is insulated houses, attics are usually bakeovens during the summer months, but in a house whose cells are impregnated with Celotex, the attic in August makes a cool playroom for the children.

The cane-fiber material contributes resistance to noise. Nervous people can read peacefully in one room while noisy children play in another. Young children can take their afternoon naps undisturbed by noise from the street.

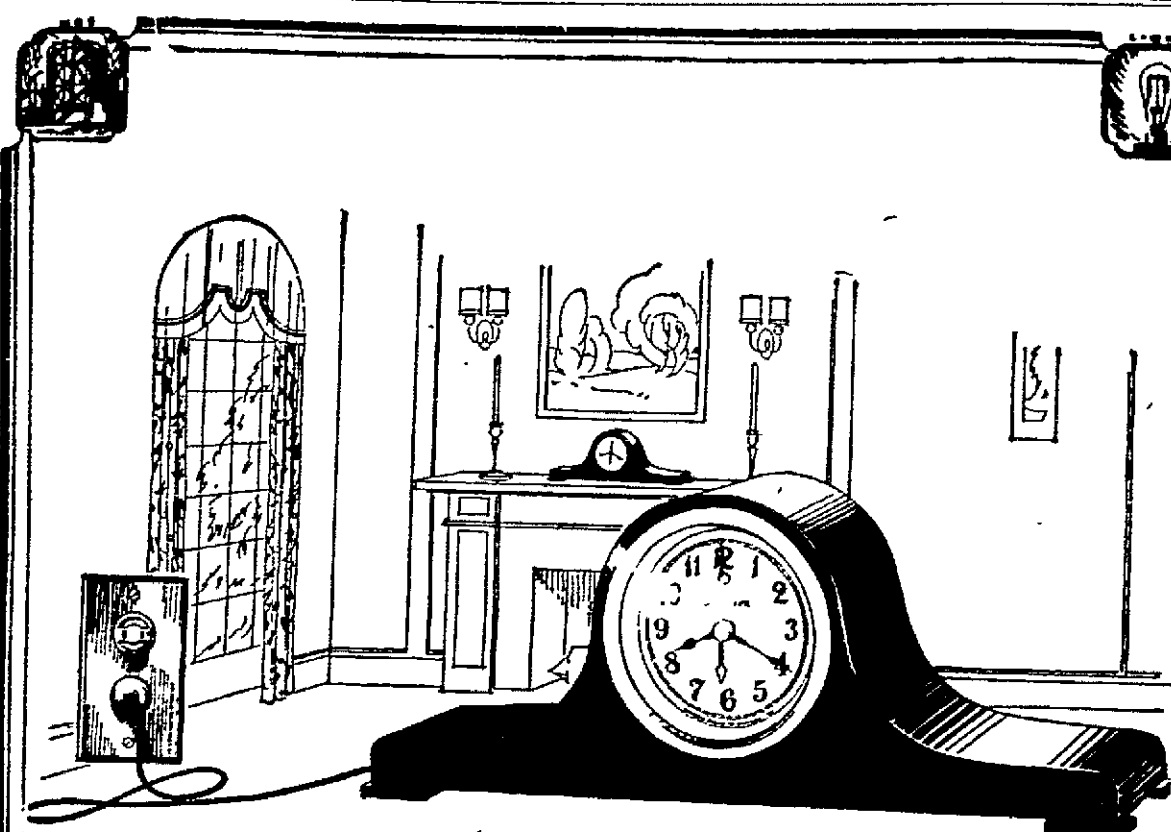

An insulated house has re-sale value. Insulation is becoming so popular that soon a house without it will be as astute an investment as one without wiring or plumbing. 200,000 American homes are now insulated with Celotex. Builders of the Post-Crescent Model Home have realized insulation is a growing movement that makes for even temperature, quiet, and practical houses, with minimized fuel bills and re-sale value, and that insulation is as necessary a feature of the modern home as an airport is of the modern city.

PRESENT HUNTING SEASON ALL WRONG, VETERAN DECLARES

Neenah Nimrod Complains of Number of Drunken Hunters in Woods

Neenah—The two year closed season, the 10 day limit and the one buck law is a failure according to Adam Walter of Neenah, who has just returned from his thirty-fifth consecutive deer hunting trip to the northern part of the state. Mr. Walter has not missed a hunting trip for that number of years and has in every case returned with a deer. He is one of the oldest hunters in the state.

Mr. Walter says that five days is longer enough to hunt deer as in that many days even a hunter could get to his favorite grounds, get his deer and start for home, losing little time and having just as much excitement as in 10 days which allows a lot of hunters to be able to get several deer to offer for sale. The one buck law he claims, is causing a scarcity of the male deer as more than 20,000 were killed this season. Hundreds upon hundreds of does and fawns were seen dead upon the ground where they had been shot and left. Mr. Walters is a favor of opening the season and allowing the hunter to kill either buck or doe and in so doing even up the numbers. He claimed that this was the worst year he has ever put in the woods owing to the large number of inexperienced hunters some of whom were not more than 14 years of age and who have never before handled a deer rifle. These hunters, he claimed, will shoot at anything that moves and it is a great wonder that more were not killed during the 10 days of the season. Another hazard is the hunters who go to the woods intoxicated, who so on the trip just for the good time and then lay down $20 or $30 to some of the old timers, who are the hunting grounds for a deer which has been shot several days. Mr. Walter is to start a move to have the conservation committee look into the advisability of changing the laws to make them more safer for the hunter and increase the number of deer.

LATEST NEWS OF THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

PUBLIC APPROVES ALLOWANCE POLICY

Truck Buyers Commend New Step Proposed by General Motors Co.

Public reaction to the "No Excess Allowance" policy, recently announced by the General Motors Truck Company, has been surprisingly swift and favorable, according to Paul W. Sells, president of the company, in a statement made here today.

"Truck buyers in every section of the country have been quick to commend us upon a step which they recognize as a benefit to the user of trucks," Mr. Sells said. "I have a large and growing shelf of letters on the subject, from busy men who have been sufficiently interested to take time enough to sit down and write."

"Many of our good competitors, also, have been kind enough to comment sincerely and favorably," he added.

"PAID LIST" A MENACE
Experience and opinion in the truck industry as a whole have been steadily leading up to such a move, Mr. Sells declared. During three years of service, with other heads of the industry, on a special committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce appointed to consider the problem of excessive trade-in allowances on used trucks, he had access to data showing the alarming growth and harmful influence of the "paid list" and excessive-allowance custom.

"There has never been any question as to the unsound and vicious results of this practice," Mr. Sells said. "It has been plain, to all who studied the subject, that excess trade-in allowances must hinder and thwart real development of commercial transportation by truck. Action against it has been delayed only by lack of leadership sufficiently strong to make the move widespread and thoroughly effective. Some, who have taken a stand against excessive allowances, unfortunately have not had influence far-reaching enough to swing the industry solidly into line. That is why we are so glad to see the prompt and nation-wide response from public and industry alike—to this move we have taken, to further the whole great cause of better commercial transportation."

HOW POLICY OPERATES
Throughout the nation-wide system of 48 General Motors Truck Company branches, Mr. Sells explained, the allowance development equipment, traded in, are strictly limited to a fair and just appraisal by men thoroughly familiar with market prices for used, and reconditioned trucks. No exceptions to this rule are permitted, he declared.

"The truck owner knows precisely what he is getting—both in the new vehicle being purchased, and for the old vehicle being traded-in. He is relieved of any necessity to act, and think both as buyer and seller, his knowledge and judgment of truck values may be clearly applied to careful study and consideration of an investment which, if rightly made, should be the greatest possible asset to his business."

"This has been for years the policy of the General Motors Truck Company," Mr. Sells continued, "but it has not before been put squarely on record with the public, and made an absolutely inviolable rule in the conduct of our business. To that extent we have been, guilty, along the rest of the industry, in a practice as unfair to ourselves as to the purchasers of our trucks."

INCREASED VALUES SPEED MOVE
"Our increased range of new Buick-powered trucks—including models of increased capacities, for heavier duty—provided us with additional power to eliminate excess allowances. Because in these models excess value was outstanding, at prices establishing new value-standards for the industry."

"Perhaps that is also why an announcement against excess allowances has been so very promptly, favorably, and widely effective."

"We have no desire whatever to gather bouquets for the General Motors Truck Company, from this move and its results," Mr. Sells concluded. "Every resource we possess, and every ability at our command, is sincerely pledged to, and directed toward, greater progress for transportation by truck. 'Better Delivery' is something more than a slogan with us—it is an objective we mean to accomplish, for all who use trucks. That is why we take honest pride in the success of a move we had the privilege of pioneering."

General Motors Trucks are sold by O. R. Kloeckner Co., Inc.

South Finally Becomes Campaign Battleground

BY W. F. CALDWELL
Atlanta.—(AP)—For the first time in years the south as a whole has become a battleground in the presidential campaign.

The most vigorous effort since reconstruction days is being made by Democratic party leaders to induce voters to go to the polls in November in support of Gov. Alfred E. Smith for president and Sen. Joseph T. Robinson for vice president.

Equal endeavor has been put forth by those favoring the Republican nominees. States which usually witness little or no campaign for the Republican ticket, this year see Hoover and Curtis clubs organized along state and county lines.

In some states, self-styled "anti-Smith Democrats," many of whom are opposed to Smith's stand on prohibition, have withdrawn their support from the national ticket and announced their intention to seek the election of a "dry" candidate for president, irrespective of party lines.

Some among this group openly have aligned themselves with Republican forces in the national campaign. Others, however, have emphasized that while they are working for the election of Hoover, they will vote for dry Democratic congressional and state candidates.

It is from the ranks of these that Republican leaders hope to increase materially their strength in the south over that of former presidential years.

The Democratic campaign is being carried to the voter through organizations which reach from state capitals into each county and neighborhood precinct.

This November will mark a departure, if present indications prove true, from the perfunctory voting which has made presidential elections heretofore largely a formality in the traditionally "solid" south.

The effort ranges from pleas of party regularity in some states to the invoking of a party rule. In South Carolina which requires voters in the state primary to take an oath to support all party nominees, state or national, known as Rule 32, became famous in the south this year as a result of an unsuccessful effort in the state convention for its repeal. Later a minority who did not want to vote for Gov. Smith, unsuccessfully tried to get the state committee to abrogate it.

Newspapers in Virginia have called attention to the code of their state which they say declares that those who neglect to vote for party nominees in the general election are ineligible to take part in the next primary.

No comment has come from party leaders on this matter, but Chairman J. Murray Hooker, of the Democratic state committee, said that the Democrats "will organize from the West Virginia line to the Atlantic to bring out the vote for Gov. Smith."

A militant party organization in Georgia for the November election has been set up under the chairmanship of John R. Slater, mayor of Douglas. Organizations have been perfected in each county and a campaign has gotten under way for Smith and Robinson. The men are cooperating under the leadership of Mrs. Edgar Alexander, national committee-woman.

G. Ed Maddox, state chairman, has said that there is a party rule in Georgia which requires all candidates to pledge their support of the national ticket.

In the fifth Georgia congressional district, of which Atlanta is a part, W. D. Upshaw is opposing Rep. L. J. Steele for the Democratic nomination. Upshaw has declared his opposition to Gov. Smith and has conducted a vigorous speaking campaign, basing his opposition on the ground that he is opposed to Gov. Smith's prohibition modification views.

The chairman of the fifth district Democratic committee, W. Schier Howard, himself a former congressman, expressed the opinion that Upshaw was ineligible to participate in the primary of September 12, because of his opposition to Gov. Smith. He said, however, that Steele had requested that Upshaw be permitted to run and that, therefore, the executive committee would not be called to act on the question of Upshaw's eligibility.

A warning was sounded in Arkansas, the home state of the Democratic vice-presidential nominee, that Democrats who bolt the ticket this year in the general election will be barred from the next primary under party rules.

In some of the primary states, the primary has been held in the primary which failed to pledge to perform the best possible bracing and pulling function. This feature of the design prevents road shocks being transmitted directly to any single spoke in the wheel and distributes the shock equally to all of the spokes and to all sections of rim and hub, thus lessening the danger of wheel failure.

The rim of this new Ford wheel is of the "drop center" type, which gives greater strength to the rim, imparting the same qualities of rigidity that are found in channel and corrugated steel, and which also greatly facilitates changing tires, as the tire, once the air is out, may be removed easily even without the aid of tools.

African lung-fish have the power of filling their air-bladders and burying themselves in mud, thus escaping the effects of prolonged droughts.

Party leaders in North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Louisiana, Kentucky and Florida are actively interesting the voters to turn out at the polls in November and vote the straight ticket.

The situation in Arkansas, from the Democratic standpoint as outlined by State Chairman Utley, is representative of states where the November voting previously has been light. "Heretofore, on account of the fact that Arkansas is overwhelmingly Democratic," Mr. Utley said, "less than half of the Democrats of the state have voted in the presidential election."

The anti-Smith agitation is negligible, but it has served to call the attention of the Democrats of the state their lack of interest in former presidential elections and it will result in bringing to the polls a great many Democrats who have heretofore not taken interest enough to vote."

RADIO EXPERTS PERFECT BEACON TO HELP FLIERS
Device Will Make Flying Safer and Navigation Easier, Engineers Predict

Washington.—(AP)—Another radio device to make flying safer and navigation easier has been perfected by engineers at the Bureau of Standards.

It is a marker beacon which will be used in connection with the bureau's visual type radio beacon to direct the flight of planes by day or night on the civil airways of the United States. The marker beacons, which will send characteristic signals to the pilots, can be placed at intermediate fields or at short intervals on crooked sections of the airways so as to form landmarks for the speeding planes. The use of the marker beacon, in addition to the radio beacon, will enable the pilot to tell not only whether or not he is on his course, but how far along the course he has flown.

The marker beacon consists of a transmitting set comprising two 7½ watt tubes used in a self-recycling circuit. Alternating current from the 60-cycle supply mains is used to furnish power. By means of the self-recycling connection, 100 per cent modulation at a 120-cycle rate of the radio frequency power transferred to the antenna is obtained. A 120-cycle reed, placed on the dashboard of the plane, is used for receiving the marker signals. The reed is broadly tuned to permit slight fluctuations in the supply frequency.

NEW FORD WHEELS ARE "STEEL SPOKED"

Lightness, Strength, and Durability Is Combined in New Product

Automobile wheels have undergone considerable change within the past ten years, and some of the most notable improvements are to be seen in the wheels with which the new Model A Ford car is equipped.

These new wheels are known as "steel spoke" wheels and are of special Ford design and manufacture. Like other features of the new Model A Ford, they combine lightness and graceful appearance with strength and durability to a degree never before attained in wheels designed especially for light, low-priced cars that must give long and hard service in many parts of the world and under many and varying road conditions.

The steel spokes, of which there are thirty in each wheel, are made of a fine grade of Ford steel, electrically welded to the steel rim and the hub shell so that the entire hub, spokes and rim, becomes in reality one piece of steel, with no part that can work or wear loose and weaken the wheel structure or become noisy. Besides, each spoke before being welded to hub and rim is set at just that angle in relation to the other spokes which makes it perform the best possible bracing and pulling function. This feature of the design prevents road shocks being transmitted directly to any single spoke in the wheel and distributes the shock equally to all of the spokes and to all sections of rim and hub, thus lessening the danger of wheel failure.

The rim of this new Ford wheel is of the "drop center" type, which gives greater strength to the rim, imparting the same qualities of rigidity that are found in channel and corrugated steel, and which also greatly facilitates changing tires, as the tire, once the air is out, may be removed easily even without the aid of tools.

Many So-Called Screen Sins Covered By Music

By WADE WERNER
HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(AP)—Music hath charms, the producers of motion pictures are discovering, to soothe the savage censor into withholding their scissors from scenes which otherwise would be snipped out and kept off the screen.

This does not mean that the magic of a Beethoven sonata can lull a censor into forgetting what he is seeing. The situation is simply this:

Pictures sold to exhibitors as "sound pictures" must be shown with synchronized orchestral accompaniment and sound-effects as advertised; otherwise the exhibitor will be put in the position of selling tickets under false pretenses.

But if several scenes are snipped out of the film by state or city censors the disk on which the sound-effects were so carefully recorded will be thrown out of line with the action.

The galloping of horses' hoofs, for example, originally recorded for a few bars of crashing Wagnerian music to accompany the escape of the villain, might instead make ridiculous a tender love scene aboard ship in mid-ocean. And the howling of fog horns intended for the shipwreck scene might be heard, instead, where the heroine is weeping softly in her boudoir.

It might happen that all the sad music for the sad scenes would be shifted to the comic scenes, and vice versa, by the removal of one objectionable scene in each reel.

So the censors in some states, making allowance for the predicament of the exhibitor, have permitted the synchronized version of a picture to be shown unchanged, while at the same time they shortened the silent version by hundreds of feet.

Producers have been warned, however, that this consideration for the

BUICK INDORSED BY RACING DRIVER

Believes This Car Marks Beginning of New Trend in Motor Car Design

Flint, Mich.—Don't think because the racing driver makes a business of driving he is "fed up" on motoring as a pastime. Far from it.

Take it from Phil "Red" Shafer, veteran of the speedways with 16 years experience, that "no one is keener about 'pleasure' driving than the racing boys."

And don't think the racing boys go out burning up the highways from habit. They don't. You can't find more careful drivers, and, although they don't loaf, they never are a menace.

According to Shafer, it is his experience that a racing driver enjoys the relaxation of moderate speed in a "pleasure" car because anything else is too much like being back on the racing job—working overtime—and a man must have diversion.

Shafer is not only a driver but a mechanical expert and has built and aided in building many racing cars himself, the last one having won the 500-mile Indianapolis classic. In commenting on his new Buick sedan, Shafer declared:

"The Buick, in my estimation, marks the beginning of a new trend in motor car design—a trend toward greater beauty as well as improved performance and greater utility. In addition to its graceful lines, the new model has quick acceleration and almost unbelievable endurance."

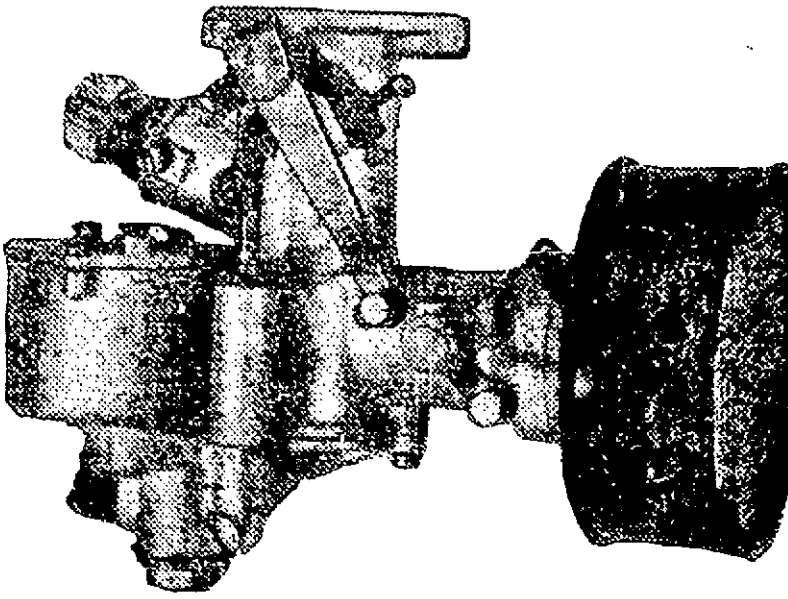

"Much of this power and endurance, I know, comes from the valve-in-head motor, the same principle employed in my Miller Special racer and which now is in use in almost all racing cars in the country."

"In the automobile racing business, I use my Buick as a means of transportation from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and it has yet to fail me in anything it is called upon to do. That the car has tremendous power was amply proved in Pennsylvania, where I negotiated many steep hills as though they were no hills at all."

"I am an ardent advocate of fuel pumps and am delighted to know that Buick is equipped with the new AC fuel pump, thereby insuring uniform gas supply under all driving conditions and at all speeds."

Shafer added that many of his racing friends have "gone Buick," among them Tony Gulotta, Dick Doyle and Jean Marzenac.

PONTIAC PREPARES TO PUT OUT SIXES

Plans Are Developed for 1929 Production at Oakland Motor Car Co.

Preparations for the building of the first Pontiac Sixes for 1929 were under way here this week at the plant of the Oakland Motor Car Company with the completion of inventory-taking and the securing of employment figures to the highest December level in history, according to W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales.

By the 22 of the month, it is expected that cars will be on their way to distant points so that dealers may have on hand display models when details of the line are made public around the first of the year, Mr. Tracy stated.

Promised as a "bigger" smarter, more powerful and more luxurious Pontiac, bring big car features within the price range of the small six, this newest creation of the fast growing Oakland division of General Motors has given rise to many rumors and much speculation here because of the phenomenal volume growth of the Pontiac Six.

Introduced on the market for the first time at the New York Automobile Show in 1926, the car in less than three years has topped all former sales records for a new make of car, and during the height of the past selling season out-sold every other make of six cylinder car in the domestic market for several months.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of new dies, tools, machines, testing gauges, etc., to build the new cars are being installed in the modern Oakland-Pontiac plant, which in 1929 will have a capacity of 350,000.

MANUFACTURER BUYS SHOWPLACE AT GENEVA

Lake Geneva, Wis.—(AP)—The house built without nails and brought here from Ceylon, after serving that island during the Columbian exposition, has been sold by the heirs of John J. Mitchell, Chicago banker, who with his wife was fatally injured in an automobile wreck last year.

F. J. Maytag, wealthy manufacturer of Newton, Iowa, has purchased the showplace of this summer resort.

The house was built in Ceylon 40 years ago, and is a replica of a Buddhist temple. It was fastened together with wooden pegs. Mitchell brought Ceylon workmen to the United States to remove the building from the Chicago fair in 1893 and rebuild it here.

TIRE TEST FLEET LEAVES FOR SOUTH

Miller Rubber Company Workers to Operate Day and Night Tests

The tire test fleet of The Miller Rubber Company has again left for the south, this year selecting the roads of Florida for winter testing of company officials today.

The fleet will be operated day and night, returning to their Florida headquarters only for measuring wear, checking air pressures, refueling, etc., and for changing drivers. It will remain in the south during the winter months, and return to Akron next spring, where testing will be continued.

Every year the Miller test fleet goes southward, and for the last two years headquarters have been in Mississippi and Texas. The reason for selecting southern testing grounds is that warm weather leads to more rapid tire wear than cold weather, and more information on what the tires will deliver is thus obtainable than would be possible to secure in driving in Northern States.

The cars are operated day and night, with changes of drivers, and three to four thousands of miles service can be put on tires in a week's time. In a period of two weeks time each car in the test fleet will have traveled farther than the average autoist uses his car in a year.

The Miller Rubber Company has operated a test fleet for years, and the present high mileage tires have been developed through these road tests, and tests of materials and processes at every stage of their manufacture. Before a tire is placed on the market or a new process used in production the tires are carefully tested on the Miller fleet, under actual service conditions, in order that the public will be absolutely sure the tire will deliver everything claimed for it by the manufacturer.

FRENCH SOCIETY HAS NO USE FOR COLONIES

Bordeaux, France.—(AP)—France's colonial empire would be promptly sold to the United States or anybody else willing to buy it at a reasonable price if the inhabitants of southwestern France had their way.

Public opinion is so resolutely hostile to French external expansion that a meeting of the union of economic associations of the southwest recently voted, almost unanimously, a resolution demanding that the importation of colonial produce be formally prohibited and that France take steps to get rid of her colonies.

Cases of drunkenness are more frequent between April and September than in the other half of the year.

For the first time in the history of the Boston airmail, two planes were needed to bring the mail from Hadley Field, New Jersey, as a result of the huge 10-ton shipment of airmail recently dispatched by the Reo Motor Car Company of Lansing, Michigan, a large part of which was destined for New England and called attention to the 1928 Reo Flying Cloud.

In the picture above, one of the mail planes is shown at the Hadley Field, New Jersey, and the other is seen in the act of checking over the 700 pounds of Reo airmail just transferred from the plane to a mail truck. The scene at the right is a 1928 Reo Flying Cloud.

FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

The real question concerning naval power, often lost sight of in recent discussion, is "shall the seas be free?"

It was for freedom of the seas that the United States went to war with England in 1812 and fought the Barbary pirates. It was Germany's arrogant denial of freedom of the seas that drew America into the World War. If we must fight another war, it will very likely be for this same historic American principle. For foreign trade grows steadily more important.

What navies are primarily for is to defend sea trade and keep sea routes open. If the sea powers could agree on this principle, it should be easier for them to agree on naval ratios and limitation. For the interest of each would be the interest of all. Navies would be regarded then not so much as rivals and potential destroyers of each other, but rather as police, craft to keep the seas open. There would be less incentive to competitive building. Granting the use of certain purely defensive craft for each country—submarines and mine-layers for local use, etc.—it might be possible to adjust the rest of the sea armament on a friendly basis.

Great Britain has never fully granted this principle. In the past Britain depended on her own overwhelming naval superiority for protection of her empire. She can do that no longer, with America able and willing to equal any navy she possesses or to outbuild her if necessary.

A conservative British paper, the Saturday Review of London, urges the British government to adopt this American view, granting the right of ships of all nations to use the seas in peace or war, and guaranteeing the safety of neutral ships in war time. On this basis the two great sea powers ought to be able to get together.

SYNTHETIC GASOLINE

If you're worried what your auto is going to run on in that non-distant day when gasoline supplies begin to expire, take encouragement from the words of delegates to the international conference on bituminous coal, at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh.

A German tells how synthetic gasoline is made by combining hydrogen and coal. Another tells of an internal combustion engine that uses powdered coal for its fuel—and does right well with it, too. Still another says that powdered rice husks make excellent fuel for such engines. Peat dust is also spoken of as a good substitute.

We may be burning some curious things in our autos some day, but evidently we'll go rolling along as cheaply and powerfully as we do now, gasoline or no gasoline.

WIVES AND SKYSCRAPERS

Rebecca West, English novelist, returns to London after visiting America with a distressing tale about the hardships of the American woman.

Most Americans, she says, "live in skyscrapers with their women perched high in the air where they can't keep a dog, much less keep a family." Lives of American women materially inclined thus become tragic, she says.

This is a saddening picture, and would be alarming if it were true. But as anybody who lives in America knows, it isn't. The percentage of families living in skyscrapers, or anything approaching the skyscraper, is so small as to be negligible. Rather more than 50 per cent of all Americans own their own homes.

The amount of misinformation a visiting Britisher can collect about us seems to be absolutely unlimited.

LATIN-AMERICAN PEACE JOB

The Pan-American Congress which assembled at Washington just as two Pan-American nations began talking war, naturally wants to do something about the matter. Fortunately for everybody concerned, including Uncle Sam, there is not much prospect of a real war. The combatants would have considerable difficulty in getting at each other by land, across the vast wilderness separating their settled areas, and contact by sea is entirely out of the question. Their hostilities therefore may be restricted to diplomatic thunderbolts and trivial skirmishes at frontier posts.

But they may ruffle up the serenity of Pan-American relations. Both nations are warlike, Paraguay particularly. That country nearly committed suicide in a series of disastrous wars under the dictator Villain Lopez from 1862 to 1870. In those eight years he reduced the population from 1,300,000 to 30,000 able-bodied men and 200,000 women, children and invalids. By this time Paraguay has pretty well recovered.

The task of preventing war, it will be agreed, is a fitting one for the Pan-American Congress. The blood-brethren of the two disputants should be able to handle it better than the U. S. The latter, after certain thankless experiences of recent years, can well afford to contribute his quota of goodwill and let the South American powers bear their share of responsibility.

CITY AND COUNTRY SCHOOLING

The federal bureau of education finds that there are only about one-third as many country children of high school age attending high schools as there are of city children of the same age. The rural percentage of high school attendance is 25 and the city attendance 71 per cent of the children. The conclusion is inevitable: "Rural dwellers cannot hope to compete advantageously with urban dwellers so long as their educational equipment is so generally inferior."

High school education is as necessary in this modern world as elementary education was a generation ago. In the old days city and country education were more nearly equal. Then country boys used to come to the city and make good in great numbers. They cannot expect to do so to the same extent hereafter unless they rise to city educational standards. They usually have good schools in the rural districts, but do not take full advantage of them. Rural high schools are a modern necessity.

THE WELL-TO-DO WAITRESS

A writer in a current magazine announces that waitresses in New York restaurants are far more prosperous, as a class, than their sisters in the more "genteel" professions of stenography, accountancy and the like.

Tips bring the lowly waitress up into the prosperous class. In some restaurants, it is stated, girls even pay for jobs, so lucrative are the collections of dimes and quarters from grateful customers. The waitress may be only a menial while she's on the job, but when her work is finished she's right well to do.

Waitresses who make $40 or $50 a week are not uncommon, says the magazine writer. The average stenographer, on the other hand, takes in between $20 and $30.

We're not sure just what the moral of all this is; perhaps, considering conditions of work and social standing, the two jobs average about even.

BETWEEN INSPECTORS

It is agreed that the Vestris tragedy was partly due to inadequate inspection at the port of New York. The inspection service cannot evade blame for that.

The vessel, however, was not subject to the rules of the United States Department of Commerce because she was of foreign registry. She was not inspected under British Board of Trade rules, either, because she did not enter British ports on her regular route. So between the two systems, each adequate ordinarily, glaring defects of equipment and condition were overlooked.

The disaster should at least serve the useful purpose of inspiring an effort to remedy this absurd situation. The two countries should thresh out the question of authority and responsibility in such cases.

Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington were known as the tongue, pen and sword of the Revolution.

Views Of The News

SPEED AND ACCIDENTS
An English traffic expert after a long study of traffic statistics, finds that something like 56 per cent of all traffic accidents occur when the autos involved are being driven at a rate of 10 miles an hour or less. As a result, he doubts if speed limits, by themselves, are really greatly needed.

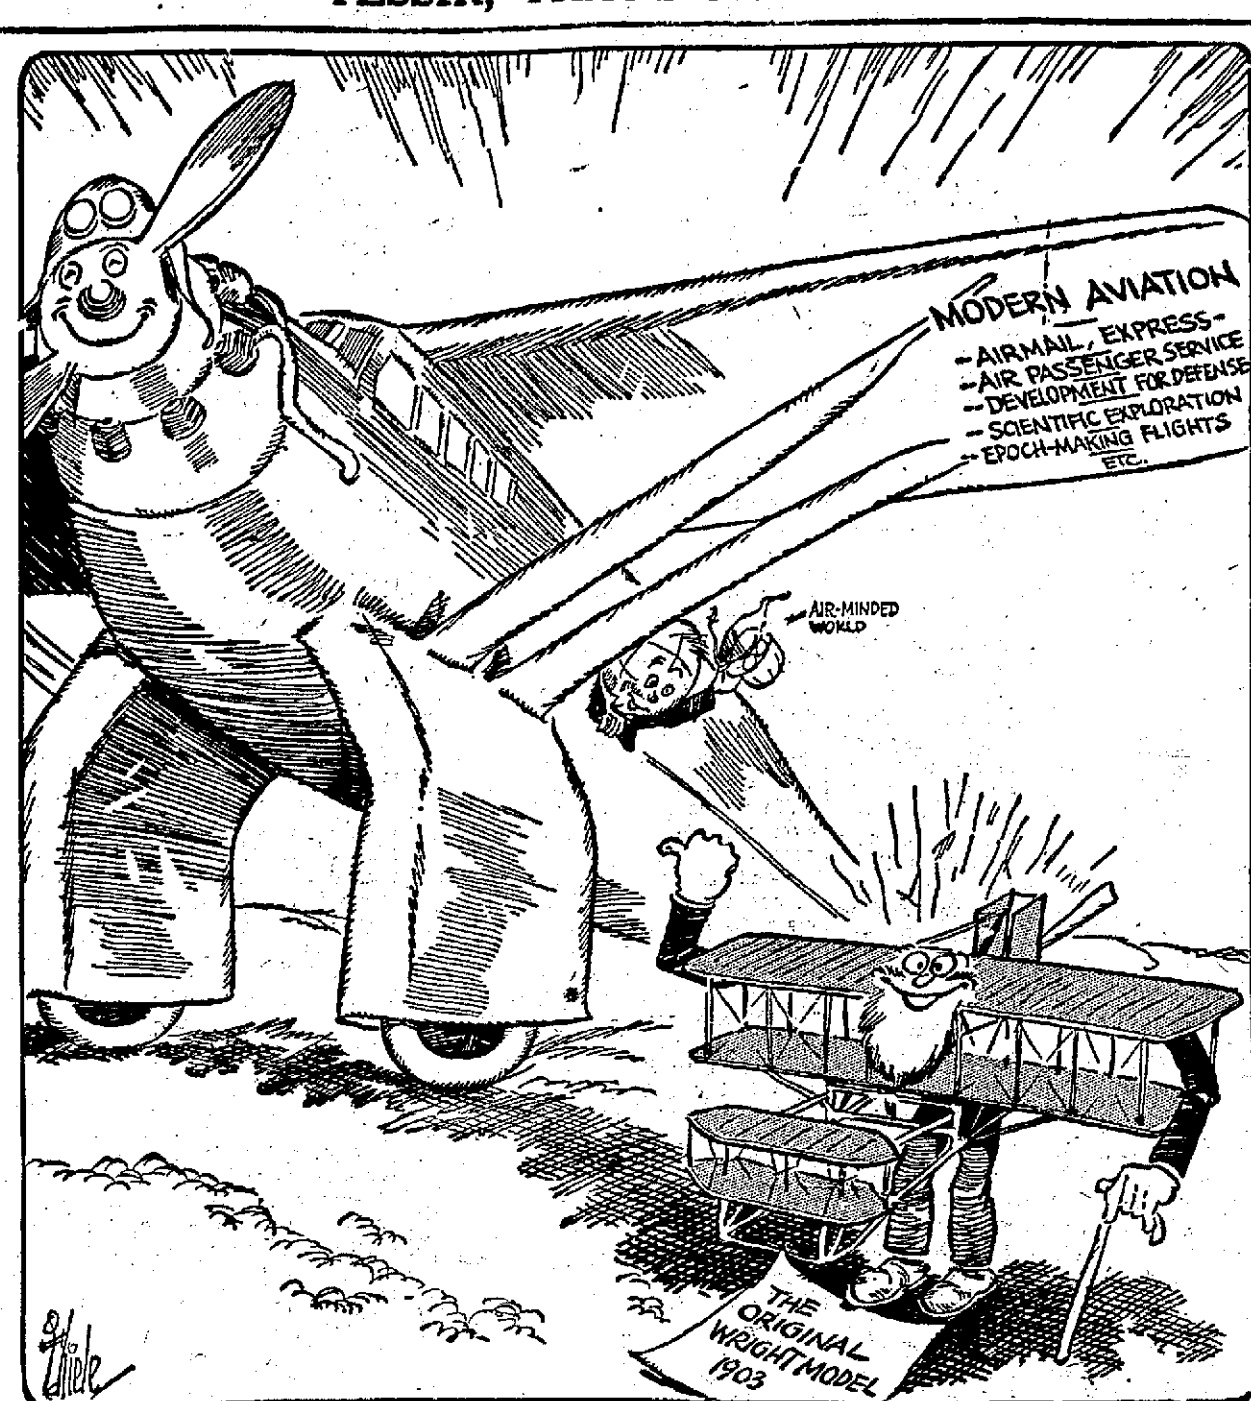

It has been obvious for some time that mere speed, unaccompanied by other factors, is not necessarily dangerous. There are plenty of times and places where 45 miles an hour is not too fast.

But there is this to remember: If, driving at 10 miles an hour, you happen to hit another car, you won't have a very bad wreck. But if you hit something when you're doing 40, you probably won't live to have another accident. The low speeds may bring the great number of accidents, but the higher speeds bring the more serious ones.

THE REFINING INFLUENCE OF SUSPENDER BUTTONS

The physician of a large industrial plant, complaining that white collar men do not follow his advice about the care of health, says he urges upon these skilled work dogs three essentials, namely, attention to the cultivation of good posture, brisk exercise every day, and the wearing of suspenders.

Not so many years ago nearly every man wore suspenders. He had no particular reason for wearing them, but they usually came equipped with "suspender" buttons. Then came a change of administration.

I forget whether it was the Democrats or the Republicans that got in, but anyway hard times came along, and some great economist in the clothing trade conceived the idea of omitting suspender buttons from certain styles of neither garments, and not a few of us were compelled to put our trust models we affected came through buttonless. It meant a great deal of discomfort and even chagrin, but what was the alternative? Could a man ask his wife to sew on six (6) half doz. buttons all at once? Behave yourself. Faced with such a quandary there is just one alternative course a man can take.

He puts on a belt, pushes out his stomach and prays there will be no disaster. And this tells hardest on the white collar class.

In the next quadrennial effort to determine what is the matter with the country the attention of the politicians should be called to the alarming growth of the lunch club evil. It is getting so prevalent that if you want to see a businessman or any of his department heads, you have to catch him out of bank hours, for on Fridays, Mondays, Wednesdays, Saturdays, Tuesdays and Thursdays he is out to lunch at other times. That is one of the surest ways to distinguish an executive from an operative. The operative lunches in from 30 to 60 minutes. The executive lunches from 10 to 3, except Saturdays.

Athletic, physically fit young lads may wear a belt without any harm from it for years. But a man past 30, who is slipping a bit, beginning to take an interest in girth control, perhaps outgrowing some of his clothes, losing the "wind" he formerly had, making line progress in an executive position—the less work he does the more money he gets for it—makes a sad mistake when he leaves off suspenders.

Not that it is a bad thing for such a man to push out his belly, as he has to in order to make sure his belt is fulfilling its purpose, but the trouble is the lack of suspenders unconsciously inhibits any faint impulse there may be to left in the man's automatic system to pull the belt in again, once he has got it out there on guard against failure of the belt to function. Even if he does feel a conscientious impulse to pull in the belly he dare not try it except in privacy. Executives are bound to look, well, as snappy as they can, and it would be fatal to the man's dignity if the hang of his trousers suggested an early Charles Chaplin film.

Far be it from me to insinuate that a successful dodger of work is preparing for a funeral when his waist measurement overtakes and passes his chest measurement, but I do aver he is no longer as good a man as he was before he acquired the near-Faustianian silhouette.

In case the innuendo annoys the expert work eraser, he may find consolation in the last six movements of the Third Brady Symphony, a copy of which the author will be glad to provide.

Nice, Soft White Hands
Will you kindly give a recipe for a good hand lotion in your column? (E. D.)

Answer—This lotion is useful to keep the hands soft and white, especially when there is redness and irritation from household work: Boric acid powder, 8 teaspoonfuls; Tragacanth shavings, 1/2 ounce; Glycerin, 1/4 ounce (tablespoonful); Rain water or distilled water, 1 pint. Boil slowly, stirring constantly, and adding water to make up, for evaporation, till a clear thin jelly is obtained. Apply a few drops of this to the hands two or three times a day, immediately after washing and before the skin is quite dry. This lotion is excellent for chapping, and some men like it for use after shaving.

BEWARE OF POISON
Is it all right to use a lotion of glycerin, rose water and carbolic acid on the face? It is prepared by a druggist. I find it does not cause pimples as cold cream does. (D. S.)

Answer—More than a spoonful of glycerin in the pint of rose water is likely to make the skin harsh and irritable. But there is no good reason for using any carbolic acid (phenol) at all in such a lotion. I assume you are young woman. As a rule a young skin requires no "cold cream" or other oil or grease.

If your trouble is pimples, say so when you write and I'll endeavor to suggest something for you.

Paper Boy's Itch
If the boy delivering our paper has itch we are in any danger of getting it? (Mrs. E. E. G.)

Answer—I believe there might be some chance of the conveyance of the affable little insect by that route. The itch mite often is carried from person to person in clothing. (Copyright, John F. Dille Co.)

A BYSTANDER IN WASHINGTON

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington—The seventeenth congress got into the home stretch—the lame duck stretch—with an administration budget program of three-quarters of billions of dollars to be put through before March 4 next. What was of much more interest to the people of Washington was what was going to happen to half a hundred or more bills dealing with District of Columbia affairs primarily.

To more than 60,000 government clerks, projects for additional pay revisions, upward of course, and the year-round Saturday half holiday movement stood first. To other Washington folks, however, the battle over a street car line merger, installation of a municipal airport, the unending fuss over what the government's share of the local tax

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York—Motion picture directors have been driven to every form of camouflage when taking street scenes about Manhattan.

The very sight of a movie camera is sufficient to start the formation of a mob that grows beyond all proportions and leaves the efforts of extra police.

In no other place can so many people gather on such short notice—whether the attraction be a dog fight, the sidewalk demonstration of a "pitch-man" or the search of a small boy for a lost dime. Not long ago a camera was seen going down Broadway on a truck and the stampede that resulted choked traffic in the Times Square belt for half an hour.

There are times when a director can do very nicely without a crowd in the background. There are times when he wants his hero or heroine to appear coming from a shop door or walking lonesomely along the street of a great city. On such occasions he has to tap his ingenuity and make every possible effort to surround his activities with secrecy. The slightest hint of such an event, if printed in the newspapers, would bring out thousands of New Yorkers.

And so dozens of tricks are performed under the very noses of the Manhattan mob, without a single man-on-the-street being aware of what is going on.

The other day, I was a participant in such a bit of camouflage. Vilma Banky had come to town to make New York scenes for a forthcoming picture. In one scene she was to be shown coming from a Fifth avenue shop.

That morning there appeared on Fifth avenue a coop-like structure, bearing a sign, "New York street department. Keep away!"

It attracted little, if any, attention. Yet concealed in it was the waiting cameraman. The blond Vilma made her exit from the store with the least possible attention being attracted.

Later, in attempting to get a shot of La Banky emerging from a subway exit, the cameraman hid himself for hours in a window just above the street, awaiting such a time as traffic would be uncongested.

About a year ago a Warner cameraman was making pictures down on the East Side. He wanted to show a great line of push-carts at the busy shopping time of day. Yet he did not want the push-cart dealers or the shopping crowds to become self-conscious.

A little restaurant, looking down on Orchard street, was rented and by a neat trick in window camouflage the camera, director and assistants were hidden. Only one or two push-cart peddlers were "in" on the game.

The scene was to show Warner Oland, the most excellent of villains, in pursuit of an obnoxious small boy who was presumed to have stolen something from a push cart.

As Oland chased the lad down push-cart lane, the crowd became a scene at his treatment of the child and a mob pursuit was soon on.

At last the camera man or director was shot. But it made an amusing watch. Oland barely escaped with life and limb up the restaurant stairs, with the crowd at his heels.

CHAPTER XLVIII

"Oh, Sybil, don't!" implored Mrs. Thorne. "You know I loved Teddy as if he were my own. You and Tad have grown away from me and I'm such a lonely old woman. I'll miss Teddy more than any of you."

She put her hands to her face and silent tears stole between her poor, thin fingers. Then Sybil was on her knees, with her face in her mother's lap, sobbing as though her heart would break. Valerie came and sat on the arm of her chair to stroke her slim shoulders lovingly and Tad dropped a kiss on her bowed head.

"Mother, dear," whispered Valerie, "we'll never let you be lonely again."

She caught Tad's tear-dimmed glance and raised her eyebrows interrogatively.

"All right," he nodded.

"Mother, dear listen, you're going to have another little grandchild. I'm going to have a baby! Honestly—in three more months. I think I've been so smart to keep it a secret. We meant not to tell you for a little while yet. The longer we waited the cleverer I felt. But now, you poor dear, I want you to stop your crying and tell Tad and me you're glad. Tad's son! Aren't you thrilled, Mother—and Sib—Sib, dear—can't you be glad too? Another little baby—to make life bearable now that Teddy's gone. Oh, please tell me you're glad!"

"Tad! Is it true?"

They turned to him together. Sybil and her mother. And their surprise was so genuine that Valerie laughed aloud.

"Well, I like that! Of course it's true. Don't you suppose I know?"

Then they laughed—the two women who never expected to smile again—and throwing their arms about Valerie, kissed her.

"Oh, my dear!" breathed Sybil and catching a sob with her teeth, bit her lips. "I think it's wonderful, Val," she cried. "And I never even suspected. I never was so surprised in all my life. Three months.... why Val?"

Mrs. Thorne was counting quietly on her fingers.

"June—that's lovely," she whispered through her tears. "Tad, I'm so glad."

She kissed him tenderly.

"I guess I've something to live for after all. Your baby—"

Her hands dropped idly in her lap and she fell to musing.

"Tad was a lovely baby, Valerie. Such a fine, healthy boy. And he never gave me a minute's worry. Sybil was fussy—but Tad—land sake's alive. I often said you'd never know there was a baby in the house. Teddy was a good baby, too. Remember when he was cutting those first teeth? The poor little tyke...."

Sybil slipped quietly from the room. A few minutes later Tad found her at the telephone....

Sybil had worn a black frock to Teddy's funeral and on her shoulder a bunch of the anemones she had scattered on his casket. She sat on a high-backed Spanish chair that she had dragged to the table on which the telephone stood and she rested her head wearily against the shield of red and gold that ornamented its tall carved back.

On the table tall candles cast a wan light on a bowl of white roses that diffused the heavy odor that comes with funerals and a profusion of cut flowers.

She sat with her back to Tad, but he caught a glimpse of her pale face in the mirror. And he thought she looked like a penitential little saint in her black dress, with the candles flickering and the breath of mournful sweetness all about her.

She was talking listlessly, her lips removed from the transmitter.

"You expect him shortly? This is Sybil Thorne. Please tell him I want to see him. Tell him to wait for me."

She hung up the receiver and turned to Tad.

herself enfolded in the spiritual garment of Craig's love.

But when he raised her hand to his lips, and kissed her fingers, one by one, she drew them away.

"No, Craig. Not yet. I've come to ask you something. But you must hear me first."

"Yes, darling."

He soothed her gently, stroking her knees.

"I've been a bad girl, Craig."

It was his turn to put fingers across her lips.

"No, Sybil. Dear little, good little girl—No."

"But I have, Craig. Listen. The man I went to see was John Lawrence. He didn't die at all, Craig. It was all a mistake. He—he's very much alive. Mabel knew him first—only she didn't know he was John, you see. She thought his name was Roger Caldwell. He's a real estate agent. And Mabel was looking for an apartment. And when the agent came I was there. Don't you see? And it was John Lawrence."

"He'd had amnesia, Craig. He wasn't killed at all. He'd only forgotten. And when he saw me he fainted. And then Mabel and I revived him, and he knew me. . . . Oh, it's such a dreadfully long story, Craig."

He pulled her short skirt down over her shrunken knees, and held his peace.

"And that night," she said, paling as she told it, "I went to see him. I went to his apartment, Craig. And I wanted him to make love to me. He told me about the girl he is going to marry, and he said she was his salvation, and his compass and everything. And still I wanted him to make love to me. You see I am a very bad girl, Craig."

He was silent.

"And then," she said, "he asked me if I had had lovers, Craig. And he came and took me in his arms. And he kissed me. . . . And then the telephone rang. . . . And it was Mabel. And Mabel was dead, only I didn't know it then."

"Poor, little girl. Sweet little, dear little girl."

He reminded her of a monk on his knees, telling a litany. A beautiful litany of infinite sweetness.

"Craig—darling." She put her lips to his ear. "I'm not very desirable any more. A little while ago when you loved me. . . . I had Teddy. And I was very happy. Now Teddy is gone. . . . And I feel very old. . . . Could you love me now, Craig?"

"Oh, my dear. My dear."

He buried his face in her lap.

"I wish you could," she whispered, "but if you can't, it's all right, Craig. I didn't really think you would. I'm so miserable, you see. Men never love miserable women. . . . Of course you don't want me. . . . I shouldn't have come. But I wanted to know. Craig. . . . I wanted to be sure."

She rose unsteadily to her feet, and when she swayed he caught her.

and held her close. And she was as sweet in his arms as her anemones.

"Oh, my darling. My poor hurt little darling."

"You love me?" she murmured.

"I love you so," he whispered. "I love you so."

Then she raised her face, all wet with tears, and he kissed her pale white lids so gently she scarcely felt his lips.

(THE END)

OFFICER PROBES 74 SCHOOL TRUANT CASES

Only 74 cases of non-attendance at school necessitated investigation during November by J. G. Pfeil, city truant officer, as compared to 83 cases in October. Forty of the November cases were boys and 34 were girls, the non-attendance cases of boys again being larger.

In two cases the cause of non-attendance was truancy, as against three last month and only five cases were because of parental negligence, whereas last month 13 cases were attributed to negligence on the part of parents.

The parents of one child were notified of violation of the law as compared to four warnings last month. Two pupils were returned to school, while in October eight were returned. No cases of truancy were reported in November.

ISSUE MUSIC BOOKS TO RURAL SCHOOL PUPILS

Such good progress has been made by rural school students, in those schools where music was introduced this fall, that during the past two weeks it has been necessary to issue music books in many instances several months earlier than it was expected according to a letter issued this week by A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, to clerks of the school boards of those schools where the county music plan was adopted. Mr. Meating said he is pleased with the progress being made in the music course and he believes the music festival, planned for next spring, will be a big success.

A PAGE OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

BEAUTY HINTS

HEROINES OF
DIFFER MUCH

THE woman question" pops out in the new books. Not the old question as to whether woman may have home and career, or home or career; not lambasting at "the new woman" and a showing of the bog into which her tender feet will fall. The autumn novelist merely seems to be more interested in women than in men, and weaves all sorts of theories about her.

Quite the most interesting of them all to me is Mary; know in her community on the gulf as "Si-May," in "Scarlet Sister Mary" by Julia Peterkin. Mary is apricot colored, may be a little darker than that—more like a lusciously ripe purple plum, and "Si-May" has more abundant personality than any heroine encountered in fiction for a long time.

The love of Mary's life is one July, loofer and roustabout, and much less of a catch as a husband than his brother, June. But Mary loves July and weds him to the intense of corn pone and pecans in the gray. Her cup of happiness is running over when her little son christened Unexpected or Unex for short, is born.

DESERTING PARENT
Paternal responsibilities set too heavily upon July's broad shoulders and he hies himself away from the plantation to the river boats. Fiction offers no competition to Julia Peterkin's presentation of Mary, a woman crushed by loss of love; the utility of living grips Mary in its clutches.

But Mary is the eternal mother; she is maternity so incarnate that even the plantation does not question over-much her right to what she calls a "cabinful of younguns." The plantation knows that "Si-May's" younguns are the strongest, earliest kids on the gulf, and that's that.

Mary has her progeny in singles, doubles, even triples; never does she make any mean about one more child. They are her reason and only reason for living. Her vitality, her super-maternalism, her come-back from the land of crushed spirits to a land of joy where she, too, sings at the cotton picking and jokes even when turned out of church, make Mary an unforgettable figure, and her strength of character as she slams the door in July's face when years later, he comes back, is one of the finest scenes in fiction.

Then, in another scale of living, is Patricia Gordon in Hamilton Gibb's "Harnessed." This is a story of those made-in-heaven marriages, with the newlyweds ensconced in a made-in-heaven cottage with flagstone walk and brickknocker on a door as old as King Alfred, with pewter and brass and a yellow cat. It's a story of what happens when too much idyllic love makes man and woman cry for roast beef rare in the way of a job.

Pat gets her job and Michael has his at first. It's kumby-dory till Pat's job gets to be much more important to her than the cottage and Michael and his job, though he glories in her achievement on on the stage. But it all works out.

ANOTHER CLASS

Then there's Lily Christine in Michael Arlen's book by that name.

SIDE TRAINS NEW GOTHAM MODE

BY BETSY SCHUYLER
NEW YORK—The Mainville-Bernadotte wedding set new high levels of magnificence and splendor in entertainment, which is quite fitting, considering the international affair it was, with the lovely Estelle Manville, the first American girl to marry into a royal family that actually works at its profession.

The guests rose to the occasion with gorgeous attire—colorful gowns and gleaming jewels—that had a perfect setting in the illuminated floral decorations of the Manville home at Pleasantville.

Black or white, either a good an-also called "A Good Woman." Lily's tragedy is one, too, of blind love for a husband whom other men do not hesitate to dislike and call "no good." Pat Somerset, the husband, falls terribly in love with "a good woman"—a brittle, scheming, conventional-minded woman who insists that Pat divorce Lily. She will not marry a man whom another woman has divorced.

Lily Christine's heart is broken; not much from personal grief and hurt pride as from her complete appreciation of the fact that Pat himself is miserable and baffled and caught in the grip of something he resents, but against which he is powerless.

Lily Christine is a significant heroine because, even like "Si-May," she does not cry out but takes her dose even though she can't take it.

Interesting heroines, all three!

swer to what to choose for formal occasions, was chosen by many. Countess Marianne Bernadotte wore a gorgeous, crystal-embroidered white gown and gems that held the gaze. Countess Elsa chose a pink, exquisitely brocaded in gold, cut on princess lines. Mrs. John McEntee Bowman's smart little black hat had a diamond pin for decoration that was repeated on the black velvet and coral real lace frock.

GLEAMING PANNÉ VELVET

Black velvet, not the transparent, but the lovely gleaming panne velvet variety, is on the up and up socially. Even the debs love it. Cynthia Quinby wore a lovely ensemble of it, with an egg-shell colored satin blouse at a rehearsal of the Bal Kugel at the Ritz Carlton. Lunching at the same hotel I saw Eleanor Fleck in a black velvet frock with an irregular neckline, dipping side panels and a sapphire belt buckle for decoration.

Red moire was chosen by several debs at a dance at the Savoy Plaza. Eleanor S. Whitney's lipstick red moire gown had a pert organ-pleated bustle, with a side train that she carried over her arm charmingly, when dancing. She wore, with it, some of the new opal lizard slippers piped in the red of her gown and buttoned with a jewel.

Side trains, in fact, are quite popular. Modelling at a fashion show for sweet charity, held at the Savoy Plaza, Mrs. Edward P. Botsford showed a stunningly cut white brocade gown, with a tremendously full and long side train, cut in one with the back section of the gown. The other side dipped, but only to high-shoe length.

Tiered skirts are very good right now, especially if they happen to be of cobwebby lace of a soft down pink like the fabric of an afternoon frock Mary Burke wore at a party at her home. It had a curious little dipping berth that looked like a cape collar, only it capped only one sleeve. Her slippers were stunningly modern pink reptilian skin with gold and black insets.

The evening ensemble never could be lovelier than one Mrs. Howard Kismet Pell wore, the bouffant gown of Chantreuse taffeta with a knotted bow of velvet, orchid lined, and the dolman of darker green velvet, lined with the chantreuse and with a Queen Elizabeth ruff collar of the lighter tone.

Gay autumn colors invade the ball room now, especially browns with a live tone in them. At a dinner party the former Ambassador Gerard gave at the Ritz there were three brown chiffon gowns, one tawny gold and one a rust red, with gold embroidery.

THE NEW
Saint
Sinner
By Anne Austin
©1928 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

It was almost dusk when Crystal stepped into the bit of woods at the far end of the Grayson farm. Her lonely, love-hungry heart had led her to this tryst with Pablo. Now she was seized with a sudden sickening fear that Pablo would not meet her.

He had said in his poor little letter: "Come again to our woods, to Pablo who awaits you with bleeding heart." No other man had ever cared for her as Pablo had. He owed him this last farewell.

"Tu has venido!" a joyful voice called softly. "Ah, querida mia! I tell me—Pablo, wait! She come pronto!"

A strange, sweet shyness held them apart. Crystal saw that the farm laborer had again transformed himself into the "torcedor"—magnificent and somehow pathetic in his scarlet satin shirt, his wide purple sash, his tight, gleaming black satin trousers.

"Last Sunday I come, this Sunday I come," Pablo explained, his dark eyes ardent but shy.

The boy took a hesitating step nearer to her, then a quick, purposeful one, and Crystal knew, in that breathtaking moment before it happened, that the one man who had ever loved her was going to kiss her—and that she so wanted him to that all the rest of her life would have been embittered if he had not.

After Pablo's lips had touched hers, softly, almost apologetically at first, then possessively, with all the loverlike ardor of which Crystal had dreamed, the two groined, rather dizzily, for their favorite tree and sat down beside it, hand in hand, the girl's pulse throbbing joyously in rhythm with the boy's. They did not talk much at first, then, in a low, musical voice which vibrated with love, Pablo quoted bits of old Spanish and Mexican love poems, which required no translation, although Crystal understood only a word here and there.

"I sing to you—no?" Pablo exclaimed at last, laughing, happily. And he darted up to disappear in the woods. In less than a minute—just time enough for Crystal to begin to think and tremble—he was back, his guitar swung about his neck, his work-hardened fingers plucking languidly at the strings, his eyes laughing and wooing her, his voice sending waves of feeling over her whole enraptured body. No time to think now.

When the song was finished she thanked him with a kiss; and they sat beside their tree again, the boy's arm about her shoulder, his right hand holding hers as if he meant never to let it go.

At last Pablo murmured against her cheek, speaking half in English, half in Spanish: "We marry, no es verdad, querida, mia? We marry, no es verdad, and go to la Ciudad de Mexico? Pablo no puede wait."

Crystal's long-prayed-for dreamed-of moment was upon her. She had received a genuine proposal of marriage. Her heart leaped with painful rapture. She was wanted at last, utterly beloved. A man loved her so much that he could not wait—"we marry, pronto!"

"Mexico City?" she trembled, and Pablo's arms closed tightly, ecstatically about her.

Household Hints

LONG SHEETS
It saves blankets and comfortables if you use your long sheets on top and turn them back eight or ten inches over the other covers.

MORE JUICE
If you heat lemons or oranges slightly, then knead them a little before squeezing, you can extract a larger quantity of juice.

Kitchens may be made attractive by gay curtains, soft colored shelf papers and brightly hued pots and kettles. Work out some soft color scheme, and with a little painting and rearranging the dullest kitchens may be transformed into gay workshops. Don't forget the red geranium in the window and the bright colored birds on the curtain pulls and light cords.

Egg yolks may be substituted for whole eggs in cookie mixtures by using two egg yolks for each white called for in the recipe.

AGED WOMAN HONORED BY UNIVERSITY

Morgantown, W. Va. —(AP)—Back in 1852, fifteen years before West Virginia University was organized there came to Morgantown a young school teacher, bride of Rev. J. R. Moore, principal of Monongalia academy. Today, at the age of 96, she still is in Morgantown surrounded by the university life which she saw founded and fostered.

Known as "the grand old lady of education in West Virginia," Mrs. Elizabeth T. Moore looks back upon a life that has been associated with education since she was 14 years old, when her mother conducted a "dame school" in her dining room at Wheeling, W. Va. She taught school in Wheeling long before the beginning of the public school system and was in instructor at Monongalia academy, forerunner of the state university.

Recently Elizabeth Moore hall was completed at the university, and Mrs. Moore was honor guest at a tea given in the building dedicated to the activities of women.

Tomatoes contain valuable vitamins and should be eaten often. The children should be encouraged to eat them. Heat does not change the vitamins, so canned tomatoes may be eaten with benefit.

Then Santa came and yelled, "Hi there! Now, would you little Tinies care to go into the music shop. It isn't far from here. We'll find some horns and drums and such. There's more work there, but not so much. If you will try these things all out, some pretty tunes you'll here."

"Oh, that sounds fine," one Tiny cried. "It's been a long time since I've tried to play on things that make a tune. I wonder if I can."

"Ha, ha!" laughed Santa. "We shall see. You Tinymites just follow me. He headed down a Toyland street and with him they all ran.

here you are," cried Santa. "Now you all can call right in. I want the horns tried, every one. And then the drums. That will be fun." The Tinies eyed the music things and all began to grin.

First Clowny took a little horn and blew a note that was forlorn. Then Copy grabbed a big bass drum and started in to beat. "Oh, gee," cried Scouty, "this is great. Come on, we'll form a little band. We'll all play right together. Maybe it will sound real sweet."

But, as they played, poor Santa Claus ran from the room in smiles because the music sounded terrible. It really was a fright. But Santa hid behind a door and said, "Go on and play some more. Try every instrument there is. I'll hold my ears real tight."

STATE PLANS ANOTHER ADVERTISING TOUR

The annual Wisconsin Good Will tour will be conducted again in February regardless of whether the state legislature makes an appropriation for the purpose. It was decided at a meeting of the Good Will Tour organization at Madison Thursday. Supervisor Anton Jansen of Little Chute and County Clerk John E. Hantschel were at the meeting. Those attending the meeting decided the 1929 tour would cover the southeastern section of the United States, through Indiana to Florida, and returning by way of Pennsylvania.

Outagamie county probably will send a representative on the trip and his expenses will be paid by popular subscription among the business men of the county. The county board had been asked to make an appropriation but on recommendation of a special committee and R. A. Arundson, county agent, the plan of popular subscription was adopted. Mr. Jansen is chairman of the committee which will handle the county arrangements.

Representatives at the meeting Thursday decided to conduct an extensive advertising campaign in advance of the tour, so that more people would be attracted to see the Wisconsin exhibits.

PRISONER WOULD SPEND REST OF LIFE IN JAIL

Columbia, S. C. — (P) — Henry Scrivens, Charleston negro, South Carolina's oldest prisoner in point of service, lives in fear that the law may force him to leave the penitentiary which has been his home 43 years.

The negro was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1885 for burglary and larceny. In 1922, Gov. Thomas G. McLeod paroled him but hardly three months passed before the negro returned to the prison and begged to be readmitted. He is partly paralyzed and is almost deaf. The only time he leaves his cell block except for meals is a daily trip to the canteen for cigarettes. He knows only one of his fellow prisoners by name, his deafness having made it difficult for him to learn others and the men he knew in former years are either dead or have left prison.

DEFER FIRST MEETING OF ECONOMY GROUP

The series of home economics group meetings which were to have been held at the county department of the Appleton Women's club next week have been postponed until after Christmas, according to Mrs. John Schoettler, chairman of the group. The reason for the change, stated Mrs. Schoettler, is the inability of Mrs. John Puttkamer of the Extension Service of the College of Agriculture to take charge of the meetings at the present time.

At the first meeting after Christmas the new home demonstration agent for Outagamie county will accompany Mrs. Puttkamer.

RED CROSS ROLL REACHES 900 MARK IN OUTAGAMIE-CO

Appleton Roll Increases 235 Members as Compared to Last Year

The Outagamie-county American Red Cross roll for this year has reached the 900 mark, and the Appleton roll has increased 235 members as compared to last year, according to F. M. Ingier, chairman in charge of county enrollments. The membership here is now 475 while a year ago it was 243. The county membership last year totaled 650 and the enrollment this year is the largest in the history of the county, according to Ingier.

Several industrial plants and two local schools have not yet reported, because the people in charge of the roll have been confined to their beds with influenza. Red Cross work in the city and throughout the county was voluntary. Workers at Kaukauna reported 235 members, and other smaller towns in the county averaged about 75 members, according to Mr. Ingier.

STATUE TO PAY TRIBUTE TO WESTERN PIONEERS

Ponca City, Okla.—(P)—Towering high on a brick-red bluff that rears its lofty head above the Arkansas river, eyes peering into smoky haze that floats eternally over the Osage hills, "The Pioneer Man" soon will take up his perpetual vigil here along with "The Pioneer Woman"—a symbol not only of the spirit of the state but an everlasting tribute to the sturdy friendship of two pioneer millionaires.

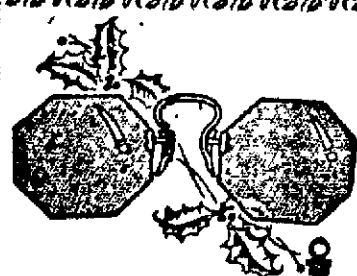

E. W. Marland, wealthy Ponca City oil man, revealed to friends Friday that he had chosen his friend and business associate W. H. McCadden to typify the companion piece to the statue representing the idealization of the woman of the plains which he erected recently at the entrance to his estate, a gift to the public.

The statue already completed is the work of Bryant Baker, who won the commission for "The Pioneer Woman" in competition with many of the leading sculptors of Europe and America.

NEARBY
TOWNSBOOST RENTAL OF POSTOFFICE BOXES
STARTING JAN. 1

Put on Extra Help to Handle
Annual Deluge of Christmas Mail

Kaukauna—Rent on post office boxes at the post office will be raised for next year, according to an announcement made Friday by Postmaster A. Mill. The small boxes will be rented for 60 cents a quarter, the medium sized boxes at 75 cents a quarter and the large boxes at $1 per quarter.

In order to handle the large increase in mail which is expected this week, as it is the week before Christmas, extra help will be secured at the office. Three extra clerks will be in the office to handle the mail and more will be hired if needed. Two extra men will be hired to help with the delivery of the parcel post mail. Carriers will not receive extra help as it is easier for them to handle the mail without help, it was found by experiment.

The postmaster again warns the people who have not yet mailed Christmas gifts to do so in the early part of the week. If this is not done, he states, there will be a large chance that parcel will not be delivered until after Christmas day. This will cause disappointment to a large number of persons. Those wishing to send Christmas cards and want them as soon as possible.

A large number of letters addressed to Santa Claus are being received at the local post office. The postmaster has notified different organizations and stores, but none called for them. If some store or club does not take them they are sent to the dead letter office. A large number will be sent this year according to the postmaster.

EGG DEALERS LIABLE FOR FAKE ADVERTISING

Madison—(AP)—The attorney general's office has informed Glenn Roberts, Danisco district attorney, that a dealer who advertises eggs for sale from "a certified egg farm," when no such farm is in existence is guilty of fraudulent advertising.

The opinion, written by J. E. Messerschmidt of the attorney general's staff, explains that a dealer was advertising eggs from "Nelson's Certified Egg Farm." The dealer was buying the eggs from farmers in general and the product was represented as "High Vitamin Eggs," but the chickens were fed only special feed.

The opinion says since the dealer was receiving 20 cents a dozen above the average price, he was deceiving the public, and consequently is guilty of fraudulent advertising.

Small Radio Stations Get
Big Share Of Assignments

Washington—(AP)—The small radio stations, serving purely local audiences, get nearly one-half of the broadcast spectrum under the new allocation effective November 11.

The federal radio commission has allotted 48 per cent of the full time assignments to stations having power of 10, 50 and 100 watts.

By full time assignments is meant those operable during night hours. One assignment, however, may be shared by two or more broadcasting stations depending upon the extent of time-sharing required to accommodate the actual number of licensed stations in the state or locality. Under the new setup, each of the five zones will have 62 full time assignments.

Broadcasters in the fourth zone, comprising the middle western states, are the most adversely affected by the time sharing provisions. It now has 154 full time assignments, the largest number of any zone. The Illinois and Iowa broadcasters are particularly hard hit, the former being reduced from 33 to 17 and the latter from 18 to 6.

The fifth zone, which includes the mountain and Pacific coast states, is the second heaviest loser in full time assignments, the reduction being from 105 to 62. In the third zone, which embraces the southern states, the reduction is from 100 to 62 and in the first zone, which includes the North Atlantic states, from 92 to 62. The decrease in the second zone, from 90 to 62. This zone embraces Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio, West Virginia, Michigan and Kentucky.

New York, which has 35 assignments now, will have 24, New Jersey's quota is cut from 18 to 9, Massachusetts from 16 to 9, and Rhode Island from 7 to 2. Connecticut is increased from 8 to 4. Florida, Texas and Louisiana incur the largest loss in the south. Florida is reduced from 11 to 4, Texas from 29 to 12 and Louisiana from 11 to 4. In the fifth zone, California is cut from 33 to 24, Colorado from 12 to 5, Oregon from 11 to 4 and Washington from 16 to 8.

"A Christmas Carol"

Scrooge obeyed the strange voice, turned the knob and entered his own room. He was confronted by the second spirit that old Marley's ghost had said would visit him that night—the Ghost of Christmas Present. Suddenly Scrooge's bleak room was transformed, with walls and ceiling hung with living green and berries.

Heaped on the floor to form a kind of throne were turkeys, geese, mince pies, plum puddings, apples, chestnuts and seething bowls of punch.

In easy state upon that throne sat the jolly giant of Christmas Present, holding a glowing torch not unlike Plenty's Horn, shedding a warm glow.

The jolly ghost took shivering old Scrooge on the wings of the wind through Christmas streets and showed him the home of poor Bob Cratchit, Scrooge's clerk. With all their poverty, Cratchit and his family were beaming around the Christmas goose and steaming plum pudding that Mrs. Cratchit had saved for so long and cooked so carefully. (To Be Continued)

NO BAD "FLU" EPIDEMIC IS LIKELY IN CITY

Cases Resembling Grip Reported, but These Are Not Dangerous

Special to Post-Crescent
New London — This city is in no danger of a dangerous epidemic of influenza according to Dr. F. J. Pfeiffer, city health officer. A number of cases resembling grip, accompanied by hard colds and tired and aching feeling and some temperature are now under observation, but no cases of the true influenza have been reported.

Conferring with the city nurse, Miss Loretta Rice and teachers in the school, Dr. Pfeiffer finds that only a small percentage of students are absent from school, and these children, after a day or two in bed are able to return to their studies. Parents are wise in taking the necessary precautions in the case of severe coughs and head colds, in giving immediate home treatment, the physician said. The public is more intelligent as to the proper procedure to follow now than in the epidemics of a decade ago.

BADGER ROAD MEN HOPING ILLINOIS ADOPTS GAS TAX

Action Would Have Moral Effect on Lawmakers of This State

Chicago — (AP) — Wisconsin looks to the coming session of the Illinois general assembly to pass a gasoline tax — for the moral effect it will have on the Wisconsin lawmakers.

This has been disclosed at the annual convention of highway and municipal contractors here, in paper read by C. J. Moritz, Effingham, Ill., contractor, describing the road building programs of adjacent states.

Illinois' northern neighbor now has a tax of two cents but wants to increase this to four. In a letter to Mr. Moritz, the state highway commissioner of Wisconsin wrote "If the state of Illinois had a gas tax, our problem in getting this increase would be very much simplified, and we are hoping that you in Illinois will come to our rescue and pass a gasoline tax."

For his paper, Mr. Moritz corresponded with highway officials of Illinois' neighbors. The outstanding thought obtained from this correspondence, he said, is "that the highway movement has only begun and that every state still has a big task ahead." A review of his paper shows the following state programs:

Michigan has had a $50,000,000 bond issue, but this is exhausted and the state now builds roads on the pay as you go plan, with about $36,000,000 annually available. In 1928, the state constructed 400 miles of concrete pavement and 104 miles of gravel.

Wisconsin has a new plan of financing but "at present has not one continuous cross state highway of 100 per cent type pavement." Their program was 200 miles in 1928 and a similar mileage in 1929.

Minnesota, a large state with many miles of highways, built 103 miles of paving and 370 miles of grading and 280 miles of gravel surfacing without state highway bonds. Their financing was through a 2 cent gas tax license fees, federal aid and other current revenues.

Iowa has operated on the "pay as you go" plan but are failing in sufficiency at the last election voted $100,000,000 for roads. With 325 miles in 1927 and 735 miles in 1928, the program for the next six years a year.

With one $50,000,000 bond issue spent, Missouri has voted an issue of $75,000,000 and plan a system to cost $206,000,000 of which more than a hundred million dollars worth has been placed under contract.

Kansas, a new state in the road building is limited by the current receipts of financing and has built about 100 miles of hard road a year.

Operating on the pay as you go plan, Indiana built 273 miles of pavement last year and plans 250 miles for 1929. The revenue is from a 3 cent gas tax, of which the state gets 2 cents and counties one cent.

Commissioner Harry Barry of Tennessee has recommended a five-cent gas tax and a 7,500 mile system of road. The pay as you plan has been abandoned.

"These programs show," Mr. Moritz concluded, "that road building is as yet in its infancy, that we are on the threshold of remarkable development."

Mr. and Mrs. George Van Ornum and Mr. and Mrs. Meyer who have been at Almond this summer working the farm of Mrs. Ella Casey, have moved back to their home in this village. Judd Orner brought their goods over by truck on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Combs and family were in Oshkosh on Tuesday. The Congregational church and Sunday school will have a Christmas program and tree on Saturday evening, Dec. 22.

FEARFUL DEATH RAY INVENTED

By NEA Service
Berlin — Capable of exploding one kilogram of coal with a force of 80,000,000,000 horsepower and creating instant death to anything it touches are claims laid by Erich Graichen, 30, for his "invisible death ray."

Graichen's ray is produced by an electrical current of 160,000 volts passed through a vacuum valve of quartz glass containing an anode and two cathodes. The ray is the product of a combination of Roentgen or X-rays, cathode rays and light rays. The purpose of the ray, according to Graichen, is to isolate atoms and help eradicate cancer.

His present ray is said to kill at 15 feet. "I am afraid under present inadequate conditions to build a bigger valve," he says, "for it would destroy everything in the laboratory."

IRREGULAR UPWARD TREND ON MARKET IN WEEK'S TRADING

Many Recent Favorites Re-gain Portion of Ground Lost Last Week

New London—(AP)—Stock prices moved irregularly higher this week after the drastic reaction of the week before. Trading slowed up considerably in volume. Many of the speculative favorites regained one-third to one-half of the ground lost last week. Several new weak spots cropped out, however, but with few exceptions, notably General Motors and Houston Oil, prices did not break through their recent low levels.

There was a marked relaxation in call money rates, funds in the "out-side market" being available as low as 5 1/2 per cent.

Progress was reported on several important merger developments during the week. The Gold Dust Co. reported the purchase of a substantial block of the common stock of the Standard Milling Co. Negotiations were reported to be under way for a merger of the American Cigar and Standard Sanitary Manufacturing companies. Negotiations also were practically completed for the formation of a single manufacturing and distributing organization for Victorolas and Radiolas by the Victor Talking Machine company and the Radio Corporation.

Merger developments also influenced the buying of the railroad shares, particularly the Chicago Great Western issues. Although some selling came into the copper shares on the announcement that production of the red metal exceeded consumption in October, current prices of the refined product are reported to be the lowest on record.

Efforts to bring about the usual pre-automobile show demonstration in the automotive issues were not very successful. General Motors was under selling pressure most of the week. A brisk advance in Packard Motors was checked by the sharp break which followed the printing of an erroneous sale of that stock.

SHOW MOTION PICTURE AT CHURCH SUNDAY

The Christmas musical program has been postponed to some later date during the holiday period.

A charge of failure to stop at the red lights at the corner of College and Oak streets, against Walter Burhans, Appleton, was dismissed in municipal court Friday afternoon by Judge Theodore Berg. ## CONCERT POSTPONED BY BAND DIRECTORS

The concert by the 120th field artillery band, scheduled for Tuesday evening at Lawrence Memorial chapel has been postponed to Jan. 8, according to Edward Mumm, director. Postponement was taken because of the numerous cases of grip about the city and because other public gatherings were being postponed.

COUNCIL COMMITTEE MEETS NEXT MONDAY

Members of the city council finance committee will meet Monday afternoon at the city hall to pass on bills during the last two weeks and transact routine business. Other meetings of council committee probably will be called the early part of the week if several aldermen recover from the grip. The next regular meeting of the council will be held Wednesday evening.

FARM SOLD AT AUCTION TO SATISFY MORTGAGE

A farm in the town of Maple Creek was sold for $50 Saturday morning at public auction by Sheriff Otto Schlieke at the courthouse to satisfy mortgage foreclosure judgment. It had been owned by Maurice Hickey, et al.

Mrs. Frank Schreiner returned Saturday after spending several days in Chicago visiting friends and relatives.

Rain or snow with continued moderate temperatures is predicted for this vicinity Saturday night and Sunday. The skies will remain cloudy until probably Sunday night when they are expected to clear, according to the weathermen's predictions.

SEE RESERVATIONS FOR PEACE TREATY

Britain and France change, or modify the treaty.

He declared that accompanying might modify a treaty, but insisted that this was not the case in the letters of France and Great Britain.

He quoted Dr. Brown as saying the treaty had no legal significance and that it was only a pious declaration of good intentions.

"If the treaty has no legal significance," Borah said, "is inherently pious and nothing more, it does seem to me that no unrighteous, warlike spirit of violence can be implied."

He declared that there was no foundation to the report that the United States was committed in advance to acquiesce to measures of coercion that it (the league) may adopt against a nation held to be guilty of wrong.

"We are committed to just one thing," he said, "and that is to settle our controversies through pacific means. That's the whole treaty."

Dr. Brown is not the only one who has indicated his belief that the treaty seemed lacking in substance.

"If the treaty does not carry with it any of the obligations I have heard," Senator Reed said Friday, "that is embrace them by indirect means or implication, then it is little more than a mere gesture and goes no further than a general expression of peaceful intentions."

While the discussion over the treaty and its meaning went on, there was speculation about the course of the peace resolution.

Its author has indicated that it may be taken up Monday in committee along with the pact itself, but he does not expect to attach it directly to the treaty. He said that the resolution would probably be voted on separate from the treaty and indicated he was willing to have it considered after the senate votes on the pact's ratification.

If the resolution passes it would be sent to all signatory nations along with the announcement of the final action by the United States on the Kellogg-Briand treaty.

BATTLE FOG TO MAKE 1ST FLIGHT WITH VALLEY MAIL

Aviator Flies Route Despite Shroud of Mist Covering Airports

pounds of mail ready for the south-bound flight Saturday afternoon.

NO PASSENGERS

While Holman was winging his way alone over the fog shrouded valley a dozen men and women left behind at their Milwaukee-co airport were giving play to their disappointment at being unable to make a flight with the first air mail. The group included Alderman Mike Steinhauer, A. J. Gonese, Ralph Gee and D. R. Morrissey, all of Appleton, the latter assigned to cover the first flight for The Post-Crescent.

Despite Holman's pessimism Friday night the group was at the airport at 8:30 Saturday morning but the big 16-passenger Ford plane which was to carry them on the history-making flight had failed to arrive from Chicago. The fog was so heavy at the Windy city that the pilots would not hazard the flight. At 7:30, the time for the airmail to start for the valley, the visibility was so poor that objects could not be seen at more than 100 feet, but the pilots were determined to carry the mail. Holman made three test flights, the last as far as West Bend and on his return said he would make a try.

Loading about 200 pounds of mail in his Stinson-Detroit plane he hopped off to Fond du Lac, leaving behind that he would wire back if the other planes should follow. Two big six-passenger planes were at the Milwaukee airport ready to carry passengers, but before Holman reached Fond du Lac it was decided that the trip was too hazardous and the passenger flight was called off. The passengers returned to Appleton by rail Saturday afternoon.

Not only was the new Fox river route delayed but all other mail lines in this part of the country were severely handicapped. The plane on the Minneapolis-Milwaukee route was way late in leaving Minneapolis and none of the Chicago-Milwaukee planes had arrived in Milwaukee shortly before noon.

The air "ceiling" in Milwaukee, that is the height at which the earth is visible from a plane, was not more than 150 feet when Holman left Milwaukee and it was in the neighborhood of 300 feet when he arrived in Appleton. Holman said he traveled part of the way but much more than 50 feet above the ground and he was only a little more than 100 feet up when he was sighted over the airport here.

Visibility was getting better as the afternoon progressed and the airmail company was hopeful the afternoon return flight could be made without extreme danger.

C. C. DIRECTORS HEAR REPORT ON AIR MAIL

Work carried out by the air mail committee of the chamber of commerce was reported on at the regular bi-weekly meeting of directors of the chamber of commerce Friday noon at the Conway hotel by David Smith, chairman. He outlined various meetings which have been held here during the last week or two, the attempt to have Neenah-Menasha listed as an official stop and the promotion program sponsored by the chamber and others interested in the project.

Reports also were heard from members of the finance, industrial, retail and membership committees.

Approval of the directors was given to the plan of having a special stamp printed indicating that Appleton is on an air mail line and that rush mail should be sent by air plane.

PRINCE ON JOB

The prince of Wales has buckled down with steady seriousness to the task of carrying out much of his father's work. Foreign diplomats now make their calls upon him and the premier and other members of the cabinet go to him with the reports and advice that they ordinarily present to the king.

In his own offices at York house the prince was doing Saturday much of the work that would ordinarily occupy the king. Public duties which the prince customarily carries out will for the most part and for a long time to come fall upon the shoulders of the duke of York and his other younger brother. In the meanwhile he will do his increased daily work at his own home.

The prince since his return home has taken most of his meals with the queen at Buckingham palace, which is only a few hundred yards away. So far as was known, he has not once left the neighborhood since he arrived from Africa. His only vis-

RESUME FILL-IN WORK IN RAVINE ON LAWRENCE-ST

Dirt from Subway Construction Is Dumped into Hollow Under Bridge

Work of filling in the ravine under the Lawrence-st bridge and from the end of S. Superior-st to the bridge was resumed in earnest this week as construction of the Wisconsin-ave subway got under way. Digging operations for the subway were started last week, and a small fleet of trucks chartered to haul the dirt to the Lawrence-st ravine.

Fill-in work has been started on the east end of the ravine. Slabs of concrete on the first two or three sections on the east side of the bridge have been removed, and the trucks are dumping dirt through the holes into the ravine directly underneath.

After the ravine on the east side has been filled, the work will be moved to the west end. Then the space under the middle of the bridge will be filled. If any dirt is left, the hollow between the end of S. Superior-st and the bridge will be taken care of.

The object of the undertaking is two-fold. In the first place, S. Superior-st will be extended one block south, permitting the flow of traffic from W. Lawrence-st to W. College-ave via S. Superior-st.

The second object is to forego the necessity of building another bridge on W. Lawrence-st, a project which would cost considerably more than $100,000, according to city officials.

WILL REMOVE BRIDGE
The hollow will be filled up to the bridge, and more dirt will be dumped there as the original settles. In a few years, after the fill has settled sufficiently, raising of the bridge will be undertaken, and the street will be routed directly over the fill.

Several years also will be required, it is believed, to allow the fill on the S. Superior-st extension to settle enough to permit travel over it.

The work is being carried out in accordance with a resolution adopted by the common council about nine months ago. Introduced by Alderman Mike Steinhilber, chairman of the streets and bridges committee at that time, the proposal met with heavy opposition, but was finally approved.

All of the ravine on the north side of the bridge eventually will be filled, it is believed. A retaining wall will be constructed along the sidewalk line on the south side of the street to hold the dirt back of Jones' park. It is not thought, however, that the wall will have to go much higher than seven or eight feet.

After the ravine under the bridge and between S. Superior-st and the bridge has been filled in, dumping will be directed in the hollow from the Superior-st extension east. After that, dumping will be permitted in the ravine to the west of the street, although the city will make no effort to do the work itself as it does not own this property.

DR. REEVE IS DONOR TO LAWRENCE MUSEUM

Dr. James A. Reeve, 212 N. Green Bay-st., is the first donor to the new Lawrence college American history museum, according to Dr. J. B. MacHarg, professor of American history. The relics given include the master roll from a country in South Carolina from the War of 1812, an "Appleton Post" of 1863, a "Richmond Daily Examiner" of 1863 and some colonial money.

Work on the museum is approaching completion, and the exhibition cases will be set up in the near future.

Report Business Good Despite Lack Of Snow

With the streets wet with drizzly rain instead of blanketed with white, Christmas-like snow, it appears that Christmas shopping this week is more a matter of conscience than of shopping, but nevertheless Appleton merchants are reporting larger sales than in previous years at this time.

However, they are all hoping for the winter snow and sparkling ice that will lend the proper tone and spirit to the orgy of buying that precedes every Christmas.

For some odd reasons Wednesday seems to have been a bad shopping day, but on Thursday and Friday sales picked up to the point where the late afternoon shopper had to fight for attention. The peak of the shopping period, according to several store managers, is from 3 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, though more and more shoppers are seeing the logic of doing their shopping in the morning and their ironing in the afternoon.

The trend in Christmas gifts this year seems to be toward useful gifts, such as clothing and home furnishings and more people are buying the expensive gifts, many of them paying for them on the time-payment plan. One merchant estimates that at least one-half of the larger gifts are bought on the installment plan. Radios, of course, are in unusual demand in Appleton as elsewhere in the country. Figures in nationally retail magazines show that 70 per cent more radios have been bought this year than in 1924, and that the sale of phonographs has dropped to almost one half the number sold in former years.

Lamps, hosiery, gloves, costume jewelry, handbags, linens and children's clothing are some of the most popular gifts, though most mer-

NAME BOYS ON FIRST SCHOOL PATROL GROUP

Ralph Madison, Curtiss Stevens, Leo Soffa and Robert Ross have been chosen to form the first school boy patrol at Lincoln school. The boys will be on duty five minutes before school dismisses and 15 minutes before it begins at the Appleton-Franklin and Oneida-Franklin crossings.

Instructions and white Sam Brown belts have been given the boys by H. J. Adrian of the Wisconsin State Motorists association, who is organizing safety patrols at public and parochial schools throughout the city.

Parents are urged to cooperate with the patrol plan by having their children cross the guarded crossings at the time when the junior police are on duty.

HUBER TOO BUSY TO TALK LEGISLATURE

Assemblyman from Washington-co Making Change in Newspaper Office

Editor's Note: Herewith is the first of a series of sketches about members of the 1929 legislature. These will be published daily or as often as possible, until the supply is exhausted.

Madison—(4)—Joseph J. Huber, Washington county's representative in the Assembly, is pretty busy these days to talk prospects for the 1929 session of the legislature. He is moving part of the work of the West Bend News, his paper, into a new print shop and wants to get the thing set up before he has to come to Madison to help make the state's laws.

Mr. Huber announced that he is and will remain "straight Republican," with no attachments to the name. He supported Governor Kohler both personally and editorially in his newspaper throughout the primary and the general election, so is expected to be one of the new Governor's friends in the lower house.

The Washington county assemblyman was nominated by a narrow margin in the primary, having only 117 votes plurality, but in the general election this climbed to 937 "in an Al Smith county," he said.

The editor claims that his paper is the oldest in Washington county, having been established in 1855. He has been connected with it, or editing it since 1911, going into that work after being a postal worker in West Bend previous to and after he entered news work.

Fitness prevented the Assemblyman from completing his schooling at Marquette university, Milwaukee in 1919. He was born in West Bend

POP FINDS THAT ALL THOSE WHO COUGH ARE NOT ACTUALLY SICK

Here's a story how one Appleton youngster tried to take advantage of the opportunity to get out of school because of laryngitis during the grip epidemic but who failed to accomplish his aim because Pop happened to be wiser than teacher.

School children are being sent home if they show any symptoms of the grip and this particular youngster soon discovered that a cough would permit him to go home. He coughed long and loud and teacher sent him home.

But when he arrived at home Pop sensed that the youngster wasn't sick and a request to go outside and play proved the suspicions. The youngster was sent to bed instead and an hour later came down stairs with the remark he felt pretty good and was going outside. The answer this time was a direct command to go back to bed.

And Friday morning this particular youngster was back in school—and he has ceased coughing.

It is now definitely known that the dog does not see very well, probably possesses no color vision and hence sees everything as some shade of gray.

In 1893 and educated in the public schools there.

Mr. Huber has served as secretary of the county agricultural society for several years and through his newspaper has further been an agricultural leader.

He served first in the 1927 session of the legislature.

FIRE INSPECTORS START NEXT WEEK

Fire Hazards Found in Business Places Will Be Ordered Remedied

The annual inspection of the basements of business places in Appleton is to be started next week by the firemen according to Fire Chief George P. McGowan. Basements in which rubbish has accumulated will be ordered cleaned at once by the inspectors according to Chief McGowan and if the orders are not carried out it may be necessary to take legal steps to remove these hazards. If basements are not cleaned after order has been received the offender can be taken into court and fined for every day the violation exists. It is also possible for insurance companies to either raise the rates on fire insurance or to cancel the insurance altogether in those cases where violations exist.

In addition to looking for rubbish in basements the inspectors will see that ashes, taken from the furnaces, are not placed in wooden or cardboard receptacles, they also will inspect furnaces, flues, wirings and other hazards from which fires are known to have started.

In men's hats the commonest sizes are 6-7 and 7; in shirts, 15-inch neckbands and 15 1/2-inch collars.

The Superior Whippet is the first car to offer the new "Finger-Tip Control"—a single button conveniently located in the center of the steering wheel, which controls all functions of starting the motor, operating the lights and sounding the horn.

This ingenious device does away with all troublesome foot fumbling for the starting button, usually located in a somewhat inaccessible position, and obviates a change from the comfortable driving position to reach the lightswitch on the dash.

While everyone will welcome this new feature, it will appeal particularly to women drivers. Its simple operation is clearly explained by the illustrations above.
